Library of the University of Toronto
AMYNTOR:
OR, A
DEFENCE
OF Milton's Life.

CONTAINING

I. A general Apology for all Writings of that kind.

II. A Catalogue of Books attributed in the Primitive Times to JESUS CHRIST, his Apostles and other eminent Persons: With several important Remarks and Observations relating to the Canon of Scripture.

III. A Complete History of the Book, Entitul'd, Icon Basilike, proving Dr. GAUDEN, and not King CHARLES the First, to be the Author of it: With an Answer to all the Facts alleged by Mr. WAGSTAF to the contrary; and to the Exceptions made against my Lord ANGLESEY's Memorandum, Dr. WALKER's Book, or Mrs. GAUDEN's Narrative, which last Piece is now the first Time publish'd at large.

DI quibus imperium est animarum, umbreque Silentes,
Et Chaos, & Pôlegethon, Loca Nocte tacentia late,
Sit mibi fas audita loqui; Sit numine vos tro, Pandere res alta terra & caligine morfas. Virg. Æn. 6.

London, Printed, and are to be Sold by the Bookfellers of London and Westminster. M. DC. XC. IX.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page 5. line</th>
<th>Errors</th>
<th>Amendments</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>16.</td>
<td>hose</td>
<td>those</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.</td>
<td>Chrifh bis</td>
<td>Chrifh, bis</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.</td>
<td>Ceretum</td>
<td>Ceretum</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19.</td>
<td>Cophtic</td>
<td>Coptic</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.</td>
<td>of</td>
<td>of the</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15.</td>
<td>Matthias</td>
<td>Matthias</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15.</td>
<td>Ex ample</td>
<td>example</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15.</td>
<td>may be</td>
<td>be any</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17.</td>
<td>Ittigius</td>
<td>Ittigius</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23.</td>
<td>bop'd o</td>
<td>bop'd to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.</td>
<td>Consciences</td>
<td>Conscience</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20.</td>
<td>Somtime</td>
<td>Somtime</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16.</td>
<td>this</td>
<td>his</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.</td>
<td>Mediations</td>
<td>Meditations</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* In the Margin of Pag. 57, after Eusébius, read lib. 3. and instead of first read fifth.
THE AUTHOR TO A FRIEND.

THE Public is so seldom interested in the Debates of private Men, and I am so little concern'd at the Malice or Mistakes of my Adversaries, that, without some better Motive, I would never presume to trouble the World with anything merely personal. But if the Subject in question be of extraordinary Weight and Consequence, and that on the certain Decision of it should depend the Tranquillity of a considerable number of People, then I think a Man is indisspensably oblig'd to appear for the Truth; and so, while he's endeavoring to serve others, no body will say he ought to neglect his own Defence.
Defence. Whether the Treatise I now send you be of this Nature, is submitted to your equal Judgment: And unless I really design’d a Nobler End by it than the Justification of one Person, neither you nor any body else should lose your time in reading, no more than I myself would be at the Pains of writing it, which yet I’ll count the highest Pleasure if I understand it has never so little contributed to the Satisfaction of a Gentleman of such undisputed Learning and Merit.

March 30. 1699.

J. T.
AMYNTOR:
OR, A
DEFENCE
OF Milton's Life.

WHEN I undertook to write the Life of the most celebrated Milton, I was far from imagining that I should ever (much less so soon) be oblig'd to make an Apology in justification of such a Work, both harmless in itself, and greatly desir'd by the World. There was no positive Law or Custom against publishing the particular History of this extraordinary Person, conider'd in any respect whatsoever: for the Lives of Good Princes and Tyrants, of Orthodox and Heretical Divines, of Virtuous and Wicked, of Public and Private Men, are indifferently perus'd by every body; of which it would be superfluous to allege Examples, the thing being so commonly known by all that have learnt to read. Nor without such a Liberty could we possibly form a true Taste, or have any certain Knowledge of Affairs, since the Excellence or Imperfection of all Matters best appears by opposing 'em to one another. And I was sure (which I find was no Mistake) that the Learning and Sentiments of John Milton were too considerable not to deserve the highest Commendation or Dislike, according to the Judgment or Affection of the Readers.

SINCE
AMYNTOR.

SINCE therefore it was equally lawful for me to write whose Life I pleas'd (when my Hand was in) the first Charge against me, one would think, should have bin, that I had not fairly represented my Hero. But, very far from that, the great Crime whereof I am arraign'd, consists in telling more than som People would have me; or discovering Truths not fit to be known; and the Manner of my Relation is to them altogether as offensive and displeasing as the Matter of it. 'Tis strange that Men should be found of a Judgment weak enough to make a Crime of such Proceedings in a Writer, who labors to keep himself wholly independent from the Fears or Engagements of any Party; and who profess'd in the very beginning of his Book, that "being neither provok'd by Malice, nor brib'd by Favor, he would would as well dare to say all that was true, as scorn to write any Falshood. But the rude Opposition with which I have met, notwithstanding such plain Declarations, convinces me more than ever how much I was in the Right by following the peculiar Method I propos'd to my self in compiling Milton's Life, and which I partly declar'd in these Terms: 'In the Characters of Sects and Parties, Books or Opinions, I shall produce his own Words as I find 'em in his Works; that those who approve his Reasons, may owe all the Obligation to himself; and that I may escape the Blame of such as may dislike what he says. Now, what could be more impartial than this? or more likely to secure me from all Imputations, whatever should be the Reception of Milton from the Public? Yet if by adhering re-
AMYNTOR. 5

religiously to this Rule so loud
a Clamor was raised against me, it is apparent how much worse I might expect to be treated, had I trod in the common Road. For if, like most Historians, I had in my own Words (tho’ with never so much Candor) related the Actions or Sentiments of my Author, my Adversaries would presently have told the World that this was not the true MILTON, but one of my own Creation, whom I promted to speak what I durst not own; and by whose Mouth I had publish’d all those Opinions which I would recommend to other People. Well knowing therefore the ordinary Temper and Artifices of these Men, I did partly on that Account produce his own Words to obviate their Sophistry and Calumnies, their two principal offensive Weapons; and also to spare my self the Pains of Quotations afterwards, to prove I had neither injur'd him nor abus'd my Readers. Besides this particular Regard to them, I am also of opinion that this is the best and only good way of writing the History of such a Man. And had the Ancients always follow'd it, our Modern Critics would have been less exercis'd to discern their real Sentiments; nor wou'd they be so often oblig'd to examin whether they understood or mis-represented their Authors.

B 3  terwards

BUT instead of any Objecti-ons like these, I am expressly told that I ought not to meddle with Milton's Books, nor to revive his Sentiments, or the Memory of those Quarrel's wherein he was engag'd; which is only, in other Words, that I ought not to write his Life at all. For what, I pray, is the principal Part of a Learned Man's Life, but the exact History of his Books and Opinions, to inform the World about the Occasion of his writing, what it contain’d, how he perform’d it, and with what Consequences or Success? I have no Reason from my own second Thoughts, the Opinion of better Judges, or the Fortune of the Book, to be dissatisfi’d with my Conduct on this Occasion. And had this Method, as I said before, been strictly observ’d, we might have more Knowledg and fewer Critics.

AY but, say these Gentlemen, you have made an Inroad on our Persuasion, and directly attack’d the sacred Majesty of Kings, the venerable Order of Bishops, the best constituted Church in the World, our holy Liturgy, and decent Ceremonies, the Authority of Councils, the Testimony of the Fathers, and a hundred other things which we profoundly respect and admire: nor are we the only Sufferers; for almost all other Sects and Parties have equal Reasons of Complaint against you. Well, be it so then; but, good Sirs, betake your selves for Reparation to John Milton; or, if he is not to be brought to easie Terms, defend your Castles and Territories against him with all the Vigor you can. For, I assure you I am no further concern'd in the Quarrel than to shew you the Enemy, and to give a true Account of his Forces. And all this, if you were of a peaceable Disposition, you might learn from these plain Words in the Conclusion of the Life: 'Tis probable that you (as well as I, or any other) may disapprove of Milton's Sentiments in several Cases; but I'm sure, you are far from being displeas'd to find 'em particulariz'd in the History of
AMYNTOR.

of his Life: For we should have no true Account of Things, if Authors related nothing but what they lik'd themselves: One Party would never suffer the Lives of Tarquín, or Phalaris, or Sylla, or Cæsar to appear, while another would be as ready to suppress those of Cicero, of Cato, of Trajan, or Brutus. But a Historian ought to conceal or disguise nothing; and the Reader is to be left to judg of the Virtues he should imitat, or the Vices he ought to detest and avoid.

THIS might serve for a sufficient Answer to all that has bin yet objected to Milton's Life, if any Reply were thought necessary: For the trivial and scurrilous Libels of mercenary Fellows I shall never regard, they being already sufficiently neglected by the World, and making them-themselves as little by this Practice, as any of a more vindictive Temper could desire: Besides, that to answer 'em in their own Dialect, I must first learn to speak it; which is absolutely contrary to my Genius, and below the Dignity of Human Nature, since no body openly approves it even at Billingsgate. I shall as little consider the censorious Tongues of certain more Zealous than Religious People, who judge of others by their own narrow Schemes, and despise all Knowledge in comparison of their private Imaginations, wherein they exceedingly please themselves; a Happiness no body envies them. Nor should I, if that were all, think my self concern'd in making any Return to the obliging Complements of those Gentlemen who (as Father Paul formerly said of himself) remember me oftener in their Sermons than in their Prayers.
ers; tho' som of them are apt to say, that when they mention Turks, Jews, Infidels, and Heretics, they do not forget me. But when I am openly accus’d before the greatest Assembly in the World, the Representative Body of the People of England, let the Charge be never so frivolous in it self, or to be slighted on any other Occasion, yet such a Respect is due to the Dignity of those to whom it was exhibited, that I hold my self oblig’d to convince ’em of my Innocence; and to remove all Suspicion far from me, of what in its own Nature is acknowledg’d to be Criminal, or by them might be reputed Indecent.

THE Matter of Fact is this: On the Thirtieth of January, Mr. Offspring Blackhall, who styles himself Chaplain in Ordinance to His Majesty, Preacht a Sermon before the Honorable House Houfe of Commons; wherein, after exclaiming against the Author of Milton's Life, for denying Icon Basilike to be the Production of King Charles the First, he pursues his Accusation
in these Terms. 'We may cease to wonder, says he, that he should have the Boldness, without Proof, and against Proof, to deny the Authority of this Book, who is such an Infidel as to doubt, and is shameless and impudent enough, even in Print,
and in a Christian Country, publicly to affront our Holy Religion, by declaring his Doubt, that several Pieces under the Name of Christ and his Apostles
'(he must mean those now re-ceiv'd by the whole Christian Church, for I know of no other) are supposititious; tho'
'tho' the remoteness of those Ages, the Death of the Persons concern'd, and the decay of other Monuments which might give us true Information, the Spuriousness thereof is yet un-discover'd. Here is indeed a Charge of a very high Nature, I will not say in his own mean Language, an impudent and a shameless one; tho' if it be not better prov'd, I cannot hinder others from calling it what they please, or the thing deserves. But before I proceed to make Observations on it, I shall insert the entire Passage of my Book, which he has taken the liberty of abridging, and so joining the Words of two widely different Assertions, as if they were but
one. About this little Artifice however I shall make no difference with him; for I can easily determin our Controversie, without using all the Advantages I might otherwise take.

AFTER stating the Proofs therefore that Dr. GAUDEN, and not
not King Charles, was the true Author of Icon Basilike, I added a very natural Observation in the following Words.

When I seriously consider how all this happen'd among our selves within the Compass of Forty Years, in a time of great Learning and Politeness, when both Parties so narrowly watch'd over one another's Actions, and what a great Revolution in Civil and Religious Affairs was partly occasion'd by the Credit of that Book, I cease to wonder any longer how so many supposittitious Pieces under the Name of Christ, his Apostles, and other great Persons, should be publish'd and approv'd in those Primitive times, when it was of so much Importance to have 'em believ'd; when the Cheats were too many on all sides for them to reproach one another, which yet they they often did; when Commerce was not near so general as now, and the whole Earth entirely over-spread with the Darkness of Superstition. I doubt rather the spuriousness of several more such Books is yet undiscover'd, thro' the remotesness of those Ages, the death of the Persons concern'd, and the decay of other Monuments, which might give us true Information. Here then in the first place it is plain, that, I say, a great many spurious Books were early father'd on Christ, his Apostles, and other great Names, part whereof are still acknowledg'd to be genuin, and the rest to be forg'd, in neither of which Assertions I could be justly suppos'd to mean any Books of the N. Testament, as I shall presently evince. But Mr. Blackhall affirms, That I must intend those now receiv'd by the whole Christian Church, Church, for he knows of no other. A cogent Argument truly! and clearly proves his Logic to be just of a Piece with his Reading. I admire what this Gentleman has bin doing so long at the University, that he should be such a great Stranger to these things. But now I find a Man may be a very good Divine without knowing any thing of the Fathers, tho' a Layman is always referr'd to 'em when he starts any Difficulties, which makes him sooner acquiesce and swallow what he cannot chew than get Information at so dear a rate. But had Mr. Blackhall been dispos'd to deal ingenuously with me, he might see, without the help of the Fathers, that I did not mean the Books of the New Testament, when I mention'd Supposititious Pieces under the Name of Christ, since there is none ascrib'd to him in the whole whole Bible; nor do we read there that ever he wrote any thing, except once with his Finger on the Joh. 8,5 Ground, when he acquitted the Woman taken in Adultery: And, for ought appears to the contrary, Mr. BLACKHALL may deny that to be any Writing, because he knows not what it was; yet from German Divines, as well read as himself, have presum'd to tell us the Contents of it, and came almost to excommunicating one another in their solemn Disputes about this weighty Affair. To this Negative Argument from the Silence of the New Testament, we may add the Positive Testimony of St. AUGUSTIN and St. JEROME, whereof the former affirms, 'That the Lord himself wrote * nothing, which makes it necessary we should believe those who
AMYNTOR.

* Dicit Augustinus (de Consensu Evangel. l. r. c. 7.) quod ipse Dominus nihil scripserit, ut alius de illo scribentibus necesse sit credere.

C have have written of him: And the latter says, 'That † our Saviour left no Volum of his own Do-ctrin behind him, as is extravagantly feign'd in most of the Apochryphal Pieces.

NOW to convince all the World
that I did not intend by those Pieces the Books of the New Testament, as well as to shew the Rash-ness and Uncharitableness of Mr. B-LACKHALL's Assertion, I shall here insert a large Catalogue of Books anciently ascrib'd to JESUS CHRIST, his Apostles, their Acquaintance, Companions, and Contemporaries. Of these som remain still entirely extant, which I shall mark in their Places. We have several Fragments of others preserv'd by the Fathers; and all that is left us of the rest are only their † Salvator nullum volumen doctrinæ sui pro-proprium dereliquit, quod in plerifq; Apochryphorum deliramenta confingunt. Hieronym. in Commentar. ad Ezæchiæs, cap. 44.

bare Titles. I constantly refer to the Books wherein they are quoted, that everybody may inform himself of the Fact. And after the Catalogue is ended, I shall distinguish the Books which the Ancients alleged as the genuine Works of the Apostles or Apostolic Men, from those that they rejected as the Forgeries of Heretics, which is a good Argument however, that they were receiv'd by some Party of Christians to countenance their Opinions. Next I design to name those Pieces of whose Spuriousness I doubted, tho' their Authority is still receiv'd; and so conclude this Point with some material Observations.
A Catalogue of Books mentioned by the Fathers and other Ancient Writers, as truly or falsely ascrib’d to Jesus Christ his Apostles, and other eminent Persons.

I. Of Books reported to be written by Christ himself, or that particularly concern him.

2. The Epistle of Christ to Peter and Paul. Augustin. contra Fau- stum; l. 28 c. 13.

4. A

5. A Book of the Magic of Christ, Augustin. de consensu evangeli-co, l. i. c. 9, 10. If it be not the same with the Epistle to Pe-ter and Paul.

6. A Book of the Nativity of our Savior, of the Holy Virgin his Mother, and her Midwife. Gela-sius apud Gratianum, Decret. 1. part. Dist. 15. c. 3. But I believe this is the same with the Gospel of James; whereof in its due Order.

II. M A R Y.

1. An Epistle to Ignatius: Which is now extant among his Works.

2. Another Epistle to the Inhabitants of Messina: To be read among the same Ignatius's Works.

4. Another Book about the Death of Mary, is said by Lambeius to ly unpublish'd in the Emperor's Library, T. 4. p. 131.

5. We shall not insist on the Book of Mary concerning the Miracles of Christ, and the Ring of King Solomon.

III. PETER.

4. The Epistle of Peter to Clemens, is still shewn in the Æthiopic Language by the Eastern Christians. Tilmont, Hist. Ecclef. Tom. i. part. 2. pag. 497. And he has it from Cotelerius. The Epistle of Clemens to James, is publish'd in the Clementines.

6. The preaching of Peter (if it be not the same with his Doctrine) Origen. Tom. i. 4. in Joan. Idem, in præfat. ad Libros principiorum. Clem. Alex. Stromat. l. i. & l. 6, &c. Lactant. l. 4. c. 21. Autor libri de baptismo Hæreticorum inter opera Cypriani. Joan. Damascen. l. 2. parallel. c. 16.

C 4 8. Th
7. The Liturgy of Peter, publish’d by Lindanus at Antwerp in the Year 1588, and at Paris, Anno 1595.

8. The Itinerary, or Journys of Peter (mention’d by Epiphanius, Hæref. 30. n. 15. and by Athanasius in his Synopsis of the Scriptures;) I believe to be the same with the Recognitions of St. Clement still extant, wherein we have a very particular Account of Peter’s Voyages and Performances.

IV. ANDREW.

AMYNTOR.

25

blius Asturicenfis apud Paschalli-um Quesnerum inter epiftolas Leonis magni, p. 459.

V. JAMES.

1. The Gospel of St. James, or his Protoevangelion. Origen, Tom. 11. Comment, in Mat. Epiphan. Hæres. 30. n. 23. Eufathius Antiochen. Comment. in Hexaemer. Epiphanius monachus in notis Allatii ad Eufathium. Multa ex hoc Evangelio mutuaffe Gregorium Nyffenum, taci- to Jacobi nomine, monet Allatius ibid. This Book is now in Manuscript in the Library of Vienna, as is said by Lambecius, 1. 5. p. 130. Father Simon says, he has seen two Manuscript Copies of it in the King of France's Library. Nouvelles Observations, &c. p. 4. It was printed by Neander and also by Grynaeus in the first Volum of his Orthodoxographs.

2. The
The Liturgy of St. James is printed in the second Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum, at Paris, Anno 1624.

We mention'd before The Book of St. James concerning the Death of the Virgin Mary; but there want not Reasons to believe John, and not James, to be the Author of it.

VI. JOHN.

The Itinerary, or Voyages of St. John. Gelasius in decreto.

The Liturgy of St. John. It was together with several others printed printed in Syriac at Rome. See Father Simon in his Supplement to Leo of Modena.

5. We spoke twice before of St. John or St. James's Book about the Death of the Virgin Mary.

VII. PHILIP.

VIII. BARTHOLOMEW.

IX. THO-
IX. THOMAS.

AMYNTOR. 29

says, that this Book lies in Manuscript in the Library of Vienna, Tom. 7. p. 20. Father Simon writes that there is a Manuscript Copy of it in the French King's Library; Nouvelles Observations, &c. It was printed two Years since in Latin, and Arabic with learned Notes by Mr. Syke at Utrecht.

X. MATTHEW.

1. The Liturgy of St. Matthew. Tom. 27. Bibliothecæ Patrum Lugdunensis. Natalis Alex. in sæculo i. part i. c. i i. art. i. Gerardus, tom. i. Conf. Cathol. There is also a Liturgy attributed to St. Mark.

XI. THADDAEUS.

XII. MATTHIAS.

XIII. PAVL.

3: The

4. A third Epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians. 2 Thes. 2. 2.

5. A third Epistle to the Corinthians, and a second to the Ephesians. 1 Cor. 5. 9. Ephes. 3. 3.

8. The

9. Saint Paul's Narrative concerning the charming of Vipers, reveal'd to him by St. Michael in a Dream. Lambecius says, that there is now a Manuscript of this Book in the Library of Vienna, Tom. 5. p. 103.

10. The Anabaticicon of Saint Paul, wherein he relates what he saw when he was snatch'd up into the third Heavens. Epiphan. Hæres. 38. n. 2.

11. Som would infer from his own Words, that he wrote a Gospel; In the day, says he, when God shall judge the Secrets of Men by Christ Jesus according to my Gospel. Rom. 2. 16.
XIV. Of the Gospels of Judas Iscariot, of Eve, and Abraham, &c.

1. That none of the Apostles might be thought unable to write a Gospel we find one alleged'd by the Caianites, a Sect of the Gnostics, under the Name of Judas Iscariot. Epiphan. Hæres. 38. Theodoret. l. 1. de Hæret. Fabul. c. 15.

2. Nor should we wonder at Judas's being an Author, when we read of the Prophetical Gospel of Eve, whom the Gnostics reckoned a Patroness of their Opinions, and to have receiv'd extraordinary Knowledge and Light in her Conference with the Serpent. Epiphan. Hæres. 26. n. 2.

3. The Sethians, another sort of Gnostics, shew'd an Apocalypse under the Name of the Patriarch Abraham; not to mention his learned Pieces of Astrology, nor the Books of Adam believe'd by the Jews.
The Prophecy of Enoch, which St. Jude quotes, is for the most part still extant, and was believed to be genuine by several Fathers, who alluded it in defence of the Christian Religion. Origen. contra Cels. I. 5. Idem de Principiis. Tertullian. de habitu Muliebri, c. 3, &c.

The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, the Assumption of Moses, the Book of Eldad and Medad, the Psalms of King Solomon, the Revelation of Zachary, and the Vision of Isaiah; but I forget that I am reciting the spurious Books of the Christians, and not of the Jews, who, when there's occasion, will afford as large a Catalogue.
XV. Of the Gospels of the Hebrews and the Egyptians; with some general Pieces.

1. The Gospel of the twelve Apostles. Origen. Homil. i. in Luc. Ambros. in Proœm. Commentar. in Luc. Theophylact. Comment. in cap. i. v. i. secundum Lucam, &c. But this Piece was, I believe, Originally the same with

4. The Apostles Creed, tho' of late Years it begins to be call'd in question.

5. The Doctrine and Constitution of the Apostles. Euseb. Hist. Eccles. l. 3. c. 25. Athanas. in Synephi. Epiph. Hæres. 80. n. 7. 45. n. 5. 70. n. 10. 75. n. 6. Idem in Compendiaria fidei expositione, n. 22. Incertus de Aleatoribus inter Scripta Cypriani. There are Διδαξαὶ and Διδασκαλιαὶ, or Doctrines, both attributed to every one of the Apostles singly, and also to their Companions and immediat Successors, too long to insert particularly. These Doctrines were bound with the other Books of the New Testament, as appears by the Stichometry of Nicephorus and Anastasius; tho' it was not always pretended, that they were Original Pieces, but rather Collections of what what the Companions and Successors of the Apostles either heard, or pretended to hear from their own Mouths.

6. We need not produce our Authorities for the Canons and Constitutions of the Apostles, since so many learned Members of the Church of England have written large Volumes to prove 'em genuine.

7. The Precepts of Peter and Paul. This Book lies in Manuscript in the Great Duke's Library in Florence, if we believe Ludovicus Jacobus a Sancto Carolo in his Bibliotheca Pontificia, l. 1. pag. 177.

8. The present Coptic Christians have a Book of Doctrins, which they believe was compos'd by the twelve Apostles, with the Assistance of St. Paul, &c.

XVI. Of the Writings of the Disciples and Companions of the Apostles.

O F the Books ascrib'd to the Disciples and Companions of the Apostles, and which are still extant, som are thought genuin and of great Authority at this time: Every one were approv'd at som time, or by som Party: And yet I am of Opinion, that it is the easi est Task in the World (next to that of shewing the Ignorance and Superstition of the Writers) to prove prove them all Spurious, and fraudulently impos'd on the Credulous. Those I mean, are the Epistles of Clemens Romanus to the Corinthians, his Recognitions, Decretals, and other Pieces bearing his Name: All the Epistles of Ignatius; the Epistle of Polycarpus to the Philippians, with his other Writings; The Acts of the Martyrdom of Ignatius and Polycarpus; The Pastor of Hermas; The Epistle of Barnabas; The Works of Dionysius the Areopagite; The Epistle of Marcellus, Peter's Disciple, to Nereus and Achilleus, and his Treatise of the Conflict of Peter and Simon Magus; The Life of Saint John, by Prochorus; The Petition of Veronica to Herod on the behalf of Christ; The Passion of Timothy by Polycrates; The Passions of Peter and Paul in two Books by Linus; The two Epistles of Martial of Limousin, and the Life of the same by Aurelianus; The Gospel of Nicodemus; The Histo. ry of the Apostolical Conflict by Abdias, who is said to be appointed first Bishop of Babylon by the Apostles; The Passion of Saint Andrew written by the Presbyters of Achaia; The Epistle of Evodius, entitul'd the Light; the Altercation of Jason and Papiscus; The Acts of Titus compos'd by Zena, St. Paul's Companion, with a multitude of other Acts and Passions. The Gospel of Barnabas, the Revelation of Stephen, the Passion of Barnabas, and the Epistles of Joseph the Arian to the Britons are quite lost; and were they extant, would probably appear to be as foolish and fabulous as the rest.

XVII. Of Pieces alludg'd in favor of Christianity, which were forg'd under the Name of Heathens.

1. The Works of Trismegistus and Asclepius, extant.

2. The
2. The Books of Zoroaster and Hystaspes.

3. The Sibyllin Oracles cited so frequently, and with such Authority by the Primitive Fathers, that * Celsus takes occasion from thence to nick-name the Christians Sibyllists. extant.

4. The Letter of Pontius Pilat to Tiberius, with the Speech of Tiberius to the Senat. extant.

5. The Epistle of Lentulus, giving a Description of the Person of Christ. extant.

6. The Epistles or Orders of Adrian, Antoninus Pius, and Marcus Aurelius, in favor of the Christians. extant in Justin Martyr, &c. &c. &c.

* Origen. contr. Cels. 1. 5.
HERE'S a long List for Mr. Blackhall, who, 'tis probable, will not think the more meanly of himself for being unacquainted with these Pieces; nor, if that were all, should I be forward to think the worse of him on this Account: but I think he is to blame for denying that there were any such, because he knew nothing of 'em; much less should he infer from thence, that I deny'd the Scriptures; which Scandal however, because manifestly proceeding from Ignorance, I heartily forgive him, as every good Christian ought to do.

To explain now therefore the several Members of the Passage in Milton's Life: In the first place, by the furious Pieces I meant, tho' not all, yet a good parcel of those Books in the Catalogue, which I am persuaded were partly forg'd by some more zealous than discreet Christians, to supply the brevity of the the Apostolic Memoirs; partly by designing Men to support their private Opinions, which they hop'd to effect by virtue of such respected Authorities: And som of 'em, I doubt, were invented by Heathens and Jews to impose on the Credulity of many wel-dipos'd Persons, who greedily swallow'd any Book for Divine Revelation that contain'd a great many Miracles, mixt with a few good Morals, while their Adversaries laugh'd in their Sleeves all the while, to see their Tricks succeed, and were rivetted in their ancient Prejudices by the greater Superstition of such Enthusiasts.

IN the second place, by the Books of whose Spuriousness I said the World was not yet convince'd, tho' in my privat Opinion I could not think 'em genuin, I meant those of the other great Persons, or the suppos'd Writings of certain Apostolic Men (as they call 'em) which are at at this present, as well as in ancient times, read with extraordinary Veneration. And they are the Epistle of Barnabas, the Pastor of Hermas, the Epistle of Polycarpus to the Philippians, the first Epistle of Clemens Romanus to the Corinthians, and the seven Epistles of Ignatius. These are generally receiv'd in the Church of Rome, and also by most Protestants; but those of the Church of England have particularly signaliz'd themselves in their Defence, and by publishing the correctest Impressions of them. The Ancients paid them the highest Respect, and reckon'd the first four of 'em especially, as good as any part of the New Testament. The Epistle of Barnabas is by * Clemens Alexandrinus, and Origen, not only reckon'd genuine, but cited as Scripture; tho' he says in express Terms, That the Apostles, before their Conversion, were the greatest Sinners in

* Strom. t. 1. 2. & 5. Contra Cel. l. 1. de Princip. l. 3.
Nature; which, if believ'd, would rob us of an Argument we draw from their Integrity and Simplicity against Infidels, to say nothing now of the many other ridiculous Passages in Barnabas. The Pastor, or Visions, Precepts, and Similitudes of Hermas (who is suppos'd to be the Person mention'd by Paul in his Epistle to the Romans) is cited as Canonical Scripture by *Irenæus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, and others, and was for such receiv'd by several Churches, tho' I think it the silyest Book in the World. The Epistle of Polycarpus (the suppos'd Disciple of St. John) was read in the Churches of Asia, and is quoted by †Irenæus, Eusebius and others. The Epistle of Clemens Romanus (whom they would have to be the same that's mention'd by Paul in his Epistle to the Philippians)

AMYNTOR.

Lippians) is cited by *Irenæus, Clemens Alexanrinus, Origen, Eusebius, and others. The Epistles of Ignatius are quoted by †Irenæus, Eusebius, with several more; but particularly by *Origen, who says, that in one of 'em he found it very elegantly written, That the Virginity of Mary was a Secret to the Devil; which †Virginity, with her Delivery, and the Death of our Lord, Ignatius says, were Three famous Mysteries wrought in the Silence of God. These Words may be now read in the Epistle of Ignatius to the Ephesians. Now these are the Books of whose Genuinnes and Authority I took the Liberty to doubt, notwithstanding the better Opinion which is entertain'd of 'em by others. My present Business is not not to insist on this Subject, but to clear my self of an Imputation, which I thought no body could infer from my Words. Yet since many were less knowing than I imagin’d, tho’ Mr. Blackhall alone has the Candor of publishing his Weakness to the World, I assure ’em all that I alluded to these Books; and I hope they will be just enough in allowing me best to explain my own meaning, and prove so tender of their own Reputation, as to consider well of it, before they censur’d me another time.

BUT tho’ I will not, as I said, enter now into a particular Discussion of these Writings, yet I shall offer one thing to the Consideration of their Defenders. Either they really believe the Epistles of Barnabas and Clemens (for Example) to be theirs, or to be supposititious. If not theirs, there’s a speedy end of the Dispute, and I have attain’d my End without more more Argumentation. But if they think 'em genuine, why do they not receive 'em into the Canon of Scriptures, since they were the Companions and Fellow laborers of the Apostles, as well as St. Mark or St. Luke? If this Quality was sufficient to entitle the two last to Inspiration, why should it not do as much for the two first? And if this be not all the Reason, pray let us know the true one, having never heard of any other. To say, that tho' the Books are authentic, yet they ought not to be receiv'd now into the Canon, because the Ancients did not think fit to approve 'em, is but a mere Evasion: For 'tis well known, that till after Eusebius's time, neither the second Epistle of Peter, nor that of James, or Jude, with some others, were approv'd as Canonical; and yet they were afterwards receiv'd by the whole Church. Wherefore then may not we as well at this time establish

Establish the Epistles of Clemens and Barnabas, if they be undoubtedly theirs, which I shall be persuaded their Patrons believe, when they quote 'em as Scripture, and then I know where to have them, and how to deal with 'em. But of this enough.

I SAID above, that by the spurious Pieces I meant only a great part of the Books which are recited in the Catalogue; for others of 'em do not seem to deserve so mean a Rank: and I am so far from rejecting all those Books of the New Testament which we now receive, that I am rather solicitous left, as in the dark Ages of Popery, those we commonly call Apochryphal Books, were added to the Bible, so at the same time, and in as ignorant Ages before, several others might be taken away, for not suiting all the Opinions of the strongest Party. Nor is it unworthy observation, that most of these Books are condemn'd by the Decree of of Pope Gelasius. How many true and spurious Gospels or Histories of Christ were extant in St. Luke's time, God knows; but that there were several may be evidently inferred from his own Words, who tells Theophilus, that many had undertaken the same Work before him, and, as if he alluded to some spurious Relations, assures him, that he'll write nothing but what he received from such as had a perfect knowledge of those Matters from the beginning. That there should be first and last, but just the number of Four, I never heard of any that went about to demonstrate, except Irenæus the fam'd Successor of the Apostles; and he positively * afirming.
firms, that there cannot be more, nor fewer than Four Gospels: ‘For, says he, ‘there be Four Regions of this World wherein we live, with Four principal Winds, and the Church is spread over all the Earth: But the Support and Foundation of the Church is the Gospel, and the Spirit of Life: Therefore it must follow, that it has Four Pillars, blowing Incorruptibility on all sides, and giving Life to Men. Then he corroborates his Argument from the Four Cherubims, and the Four Faces in Ezekiel’s Vision, to wit, of a Lyon, an Ox, a Man, and an Eagle; which is the Reason, by the way, why the Four Evangelists are painted with these Emblems in the Mass-Book and in our Common Pray’r-Book. So he concludes at last, That they are all vain, unlearn’d, and impudent, who after this would assert, that there were more or fewer than 4 Gospels. Where we may observe, that Mr. Blackhall has the Warrant of an ancient Father for giving hard Names to such as contemn precarious Reasoning: And indeed it is but too manifest to be deny’d, that no Order of Men have more violated the Rules of Decency and Civility in their Writings, than those whose Business it is to teach others Moderation, Patience, and Forgiveness; nor was there ever any Cause more defended by the Dint of Calumny than that of Religion, which least needed it of any other.

SEVERAL of these Books whereof I now treat, are quoted to prove important Points of the Christian Religion by the most celebrated Fathers, as of equal Authority with those we now receive; and the Testimony of these Fathers was the principal Reason of establishing these in our present Cannon, and is still alledg’d to that purpose by all that write in defence of the Scriptures.
turies. Of so much weight is this Testimony, that Eusebius * rejects the Acts, Gospel, Preaching, and Revelation of Peter from being Authentic, for no other Reason, but because no Ancient or Modern Writer (says he) has quoted Proofs out of them. But herein Eusebius was mistaken; for the contrary appears by the Testimonies market in the Catalogue, and which any body may compare with the Originals. In another place he † says, That the Gospels of Peter, Thomas, Matthias, and such like, with the Acts of Andrew, John, and the other Apostles are spurious, because no Ecclesiastical Writer from

* Τότε τῶν ἐπικεκλημένων αὐτῶν ὑπὸ Ἀρτέμιδος, κύριος Ἰερώνυμος, ἔτη τρίκαλα ἐπεξεργάζετο τῇ αὐτῇ καὶ τῇ προσεχθείσῃ συναξώματι καὶ παρατόθηκεν ὡς ἠγαθολικικισμένος. Περισσοτέρως ὡς μὴ διακαύνων μὴν τῶν κατὰ τὸν Βούδα καὶ τῶν οἰκουμενικῶν συνεργείων ταῖς ἔξω αὐτῶν συνεχίζων μακτυρίας.

† Ηταν οὖς Πέτρος καὶ Θεομάς, καὶ Ματθαῖος, καὶ Ερωτοστάτης καὶ Ίωάννης καὶ Ανδρέας, καὶ Ἰωάννης καὶ Ναπαθιαὶς καὶ Παύλου καὶ τῶν άλλων ἀποστόλων πρεσβείων, ὡς καὶ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ τῶν κατά εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐκκλησιαστικῶν παρατόθηκεν ὡς μὲν πρὸς ἐκκλησιαστικόν παρατόθηκεν, αὕτη δὲ μὲν μετέχει ὡς καὶ ἐν καθαρών ἐκκλησιαστικῶν παρατόθηκεν.
the time of the Apostles down to his own, has vouchsaf'd to quote them, which is absolutely false of som, as we have already shewn. So that Mr. Blackhall is not the only Man, I find, who makes his own Reading the Measure of all Truth; and a Thousand to One but now he justifies this Practice, since he can prove it from Antiquity, and he has got the Authority of so great a Father on his side. Had Eusebius found any of these Pieces cited by the precedent Orthodox Writers, he would have own'd them as the genuin Productions of the Apostles, and admitted them (as we say) into the Canon; but having met no such Citations, he presently concluded there were none, which made him reject those Books: And, I say, what I have already demonstrated, that Proofs were quoted out of som of 'em long before, so that they might still belong to the Canon for all Eusebius.
AMYNTOR. 55

TO these Considerations two Objections may perhaps be made. First, It is unlikely, they'll say, that Eusebius should not have read the Ancients; nay, that the contrary appears by his many Citations out of them; and that consequently those Works of the Fathers, which we have now in our Hands, are not the same which were read in his time, or that at least they are strangely adulterated, and full of Interpolations. With all my Heart: But then let us not be urg'd by their Authority in other Points no more than in this, since in one thing they may as well be alter'd and corrupted as in another; and indeed, by a common Rule of Equity (being found chang'd in som places) they ought to be so reputed in all the rest, till the contrary be evidently prov'd.

The second Objection is, That altho' these Pieces have bin acknowledg'd to be the Writings of those Apostles whose Names they bear, at certain times, and in some Churches, yet they were expressly rejected by others. To this I answer, That there is not one single Book in the New Testament which was not refus’d by some of the Ancients as unjustly father’d upon the Apostles, and really forg’d by their Adversaries; which as no body thinks it now a good Reason to disapprove them, so I see not how it should any more conclude against my Opinion. But because the various Sects of those early Days did, like us, condemn one another for damnable Heretics; and the admitting or refusing, the framing or corrupting of certain Books, were some of the Crimes which were mutually imputed, I shall now insist only on the Epistle to the Hebrews, that of James, the second of Peter, the second and third of John, the Epistle of of Jude, and the Revelation. These seven Pieces were a long time plainly doubted by the Ancients, particularly by those whom we esteem the soundest part; and yet they are receiv'd, (not without convincing Arguments) by the Moderns. Now, I say, by more than a Parity of Reason, that the Preaching and Revelation of Peter (for Example) were receiv'd by the Ancients, and ought not therefore to be rejected by the Moderns, if the Approbation of the Fathers be a proper Recommendation of any Books.

The Council of Laodicea, which was held about three hundred and sixty Years after Christ, and is the first Assembly wherein the Canon of Scripture was established, could not among so great a variety of Books as were then abroad in the World, certainly determin which were the true Monuments of the Apostles, but either by a particular Revelation from Heaven, or by crediting the Testimony of their Ancestors, which was always better preserv'd and convey'd by Writing than by Oral Tradition, the most uncertain Rule in Nature, witness the monstrous Fables of Papists, Rabbins, Turks, and the Eastern Nations both Christians and Idolaters. But of any extraordinary Revelation made to this Council we hear not a Word; and for the Books I defend, I have the same Testimony which is usually alledg'd in the behalf of others. However, I shall not be too hasty to make a final Decision of this Matter with my self, least I incur the dreadful Curse which the Author of the Revelation pronounces against such as shall add or take take away from that Book. Let Mr. Blackhall be assur'd, that if he must needs have me to be a Heretic I am not unteachable, tho' I would not have it reputed Obstinacy if I should not surrender without satisfactory Reasons. Instead therefore of censuring and calumniating (which ought not to be reckon'd Virtues in any Order of Men, and least of all in the Ministers of the Gospel) let such as are better enlighten'd endeavor to extricat the Erroneous out of these or the like Difficulties, that they may be able to distinguish truly, and that in such an extraordinary number of Books, all pretending equally to a Divine Origin, they may have some infallible Marks of discerning the proper Rule, lest they unhappily mistake the false one for the true.

HOW necessary it is to have the Canon of Scripture set in its due light, we may learn from the Ancient as well as our Modern Unbelievers. Celsus * exclaims against the too great Liberty which the Christians (as if they were drunk, says he) took of changing the first writing of the Gospel three, or four, or more times, that so they might deny whatever was urg'd against 'em as retracted before. Nay, as low down as St. Augustine's time, was there not a very considerable Sect of the Christians themselves, I mean the Manichæans, who shewed other Scriptures, and deny'd the Genuineness of the whole New Testament. One of these call'd Faustus, after shewing that his Adversaries disapprov'd of several things in the Old Testament, thus pursues his

*Tίνας τῶν πεσωντων φήσων (Κέλσω) ας εκ μένων ἡποντιείς το ἔφεσα αι αὐτοῖς. μεταξαφθησαν εκ το πρώτης γεγραφος το ευαγγελιον τετικα, κυ τετικα, κυ πολλακα ευ μεταπλαπταιν ἵναι ἐκεῖν απὸ τος ελεγχς ἔτεινωσε. Origen.1. 2. contra Cels Argument: 'You think, says he, that of all Books in the World, the Testament of the Son only could not be corrupted, that it alone contains nothing which ought to be disallow'd; especially when it appears, that it was neither written by himself nor his Apostles, but a long time after by certain obscure Persons, who, left no Credit should be given to the Stories they told of what they could not know, did prefix to their Writings partly the Names of the Apostles, and partly of those who succeeded the Apostles; affirming that what they wrote themselves was written by these:

† Solius filii testamentum non potuisse corrumpi; solum non habere aliquid quod in se debeat improbari: praetertim quod nec ab ipso scriptum constat, nec ab ejus apostolis: sed longo tempore a quibusdam incerti nominis viris, qui, ne sibi non haberetur fides scribentibus quæ necearent, partim Apostolorum nomina, partim eorum qui Apostolos fecuti vidissent, Scriptorum horum frontibus indiderunt, atque invenientes.
Wherein they seem to me (continues he) to have bin the more hainously injurious to the Disciples of Christ, by attributing to them what they wrote themselves so dissonant and repugnant; and that they pretended to write those Gospels under their Names, which are so full of Mistakes, of contradictory Relations and Opinions, that they are neither coherrent with themselves, nor consistent with one another. What is this therefore but to throw a Calumny on good Men, and to fix the Accusation of Discord on the Unanimous Society of Christ's Disciples? The same Faustus dum eos se scripsisse quæ scripserint. Quo magis mihi videntur injuria gravi affecisse discipulos Christi, quia quæ dissona idem & repugnantia sibi scriberent, ea referrent ad ipsos, & secundum eos hæc scribere se promitterentur Evangelia, quæ tantis sint referata erroribus, tantis contrarietatis narrationum simul ac sententiarum, ut nec sibi proffus, nec inter se conveniant. Quid ergo aliud est quam calumniari bonos, & Christi Discipulorum concordem coetum in crimen devo care discordiae. Augustin. contra Faust. l. 32. c. 2. a lita little after accuses his Adversaries, who had Power enough to be counted Orthodox, in these express Words: * 'Many things were foisted by your Ancestors into the Scriptures of our Lord, which, tho' mark'd with his Name, agree not with his Faith. And no wonder, since, as those of our Party have already frequently prov'd, these things were neither written by himself nor his Apostles: but several Matters after their Decease were pick'd up from Stories and flying Reports by I know not what Set of Half-Jews; and these not agreeing among themselves, who

* Multa à majoribus vestris eloquiis Domini nostri inserta verba sunt, quæ nomine signata ipsius cum ejus fide non congruunt; præterea quia, ut jam fæpe probatum à nobis est, nec ab iplo hæc sunt, nec ab ejus Apostolis scripta: sed multa post eorum assumptionem a nescio quibus, & ipsis inter se non concordantibus Semi-judæis, per famas opinionésque comperta sunt.
nevertheless publishing all these Particulars under the Names of the Apostles of the Lord, or of those that succeeded them, have feign’d their own Lyes and Errors to be written according to them. Since therefore the Manichæans rejected the whole New Testament, since the Ebionites or Nazarens, (who were the oldest Christians) had a different Copy of St. Matthew’s Gospel, and the Marcionites, had a very different one of St. Luke’s; since St. John’s was attributed to Cerinthus, all the Epistles of St. Paul were deny’d by som, a different Copy of ’em shewn by others; and that the seven Pieces we mention’d before, were rejected a long time by all Christians, al-

Qui tamen omnia eadem in Apostolorum Domini conferentes nomina, vel eorum qui fecuti Apostolos viderentur, errores ac mendacia sua secundum eos scriptisse mentiti sunt. Augustin. ibid. l. 33. c. 3. most most with universal Consent, it had much more become Mr. Blackhall's Profession to appear better acquainted with these things, and commendably to spend his time in preventing the Mischievous Inferences which Heretics may draw from hence, or to remove the Scruples of doubting but sincere Christians, than so publicly to vent his Malice against a Man that never injur'd him, and who appears so little to deserve the Imputation of Incredulity, that his Fault (if it may be) does rather consist in believing more Scripture than his Adversaries.

WHAT need had Mr. Blackhall to inform that August Assembly how little he knew of the History of the Canon? A History of the greatest Importance, as well as containing the most curious Enquiries; and without an exact Knowledge whereof it is not conceivable that any Man can be fit to convince Gainsayers, or to demonstrate the Truth of the Christian Religion, which, I suppose he will not think fit to deny is one of the principal Duties of a Minister. How little soever he knew before, he cannot be ignorant any longer that there were a Multitude of other Pieces attributed to Christ and his Apostles, besides those now receiv'd by the whole Christian Church. He might at his Leisure have learnt so much from the Fathers, or at least from others that had study'd 'em; such as Rivet, Father Simon, Dupin, Iittgious, Dr. Cave, Ernestus Grabius who has lately publish'd som of those Fragments at Oxford, and several others; tho' he has occasion'd me to present him now with a much larger Catalogue than was publish'd by any of these. I could add more not there mentioned, and other Authorities for those which are there: there: but I have already done more than enough to prove a thing, whereof, till the last thirtieth of January, I thought few Laymen wholly ignorant, much less any one of the Clergy. Indeed I never thought the History of our Canon so impartially handled, or so fully clear'd as a Matter of such great Importance deserves; and I despair of Mr. Blackhall's giving the World any Satisfaction in their Doubts concerning it. But I hope some abler Person of his Order may particularly write on this Subject; which, if I see neglected also by them, I shall think it no Intrusion on their Office to undertake it myself: and if I ever write it, I promise it shall be the fairest History, and the only one of that kind that ever appear'd; For I shall lay all the Matters of Fact together in their natural Order, without making the least Remark of my own, or giving it a Color in favor favor of any Sect or Opinion, leaving all the Word to judge for themselves, and to build what they please with those Materials I shall furnish 'em.

I CONCLUDE this Point with one Observation, to shew with what Malice I am treated by some People, while others pass with them for the most Orthodox Men in the World, who have said infinit-ly more in plain and direct Words, than they could infer with all their Art from a few Expressions of mine, and which the most ignorant of my Adversaries could make no more than Insinuation at the worst.
I talkt of spurious Pieces, and have now as well shewn what those Pieces were, as put a Distinction between 'em, and such as I thought genuine.
But let us hear what a Person says, who, were he as much given to the World as many of his Friends, would make a more considerable Figure, considering his great Services
vices to the National Church, and the Respect he reciprocally receives from it; I mean the famous Dodwell, who alone, tho' a Layman, understands as much of Ecclesiastic History as the Divines of all Churches put together. His Words are these: * 'The Canonical Writings lay conceal'd in the Coffers of privat Churches or Persons, till the later Times of Trajan; or rather perhaps of Adrian; so that they could not come to the Knowledg of the whole Church.; For if they had bin publish'd, they wou'd have bin overwhelm'd under such a Multitude as were then of Apocryphal and Supposititious Books, that a new Examination and a

* Latitabant usque ad recentiora illa, feu Trajani, feu etiam fortasse Hadriani tempora, in privatarum ecclesiaram, feu etiam hominum Scripta illa Canonica, nè ad Ecclesiae Catholicae notitiam pervenirent. Aut si in publicum fortasse prodiissent, adhuc tamen tanta Scriptorum Apocryphorum, Pseudepigraphorumque new Testimony would be necessary to distinguish them from these false ones. And it is from this New Testimony (whereby the genuine Writings of the Apostles were distinguished from the spurious Pieces which went under their Names) that depends all the Authority which the truly Apostolic Writings have formerly obtained, or which they have at present in the Catholic Church. But this fresh Attestation of the Canon is subject to the same Inconveniences with those Traditions of the Ancient Persons that I defend, and whom Irenæus both heard and saw: for it is equally distant from the Original, and could not be made, except by such only as had reacht those remote Times. But 'tis very certain, that before the Period I mention'd of Trajan's time, the Canon of the Sacred Books was not yet fixt, nor any certain number of Books receiv'd in the Catholic Church, whose Authority must ever after serve to determin Matters of Faith; neither were the spurious Pieces of Heretics yet rejected, nor were the faithful admonisht to beware of them for the future. Likewise the true Writings of the tiones; erat enim illa tanto intervallo ab origine remota, nec plurium esse poterat quam eorum qui etiam remotiora illa tempora attigerant. Atqui certè ante illam Epocham, quam dixi Trajani, nondum constitutus est librorum Sacrorum Canon, nec receptus aliquis in Ecclesia Catholica librorum certus numerus, quos deinde adhibere oportuerit in færitis fidei causis diuidicandis, nec rejecti Haereticorum Pseudepigraphi, monitieve fideles, ut ab eorum usu deinde caverent. Sic autem vera Apostolorum Scripta cum F 4 ° Apo Apothles us'd to be so bound up in one Volum with the Apocryphal, that it was not manifest by any Mark or public Censure of the Church, which of 'em should be prefer'd to the other. We have at this Day certain most authentic Ecclesiastic Writers of those times, as Clemens Romanus, Barnabas, Hermas, Ignatius, and Polycarpus, who wrote in this same Order wherein I have nam'd 'em, and after all the other Writers of the New Testament, except Jude and the two Johns. But in Hermas you shall not meet with one Passage, or any mention of Apochryphis in iisdem Voluminibus compingi solèbant, ut nulla prorsus nota aut censura Ecclesiæ publica constaret quæ quibus essent antererenda. Habemus hodieque horum temporum Scriptores Ecclesiasticos luculentissimos Clementem Romanum, Barnabam, Hermam, Ignatium, Polycarpum, qui hoc nimirum scripsissent, quo illos nominavi ordine, omnes reliquis novi Testamenti Scriptis (exceptis Judæ, & Joannis utriusque) juniores. At novi Testamenti in Herma ne quidem unum locum in-the New Testament: Nor in all the rest is any one of the Evangelists call'd by his own Name. And if sometimes they cite any Passages like those we read in our Gospels, yet you'll find 'em so much chang'd, and for the most part so interpolated, that it cannot be known whether they produc'd them out of ours, or from Apocryphal Gospels: nay, they sometimes cite Passages, which it is most certain are not in the present Gospels. From hence therefore it is evident, that no difference was yet put by the Church between the Apocryphal veneris. Apud reliquos nè unum quidem Evangelistam, nomine suo compellatum. Et liquis locos fortè proferant quibus similis in nostris leguntur Evangelisiis; ita tamen illos mutatos ut plurimum interpolatosque reperies, ut seiri nequeat an è nostris illos, an ex aliis produxerint Apocryphis Evangelisiis. Sed & Apocrypha adhibent idem aliquories, quæ certum est in hodiernis non haberi Evangelisiis. Ut inde conflict, nullum adhuc inter Apocryphos and Canonical Books of the New Testament; especially if it be consider'd, that they pass no Censure on the Apocryphal, nor leave any Mark whereby the Reader might discern that they attributed less Authority to the spurious than to the genuine Gospels: from whence it may reasonably be suspected, that if they cite somtimes any Passages conformable to ours, it was not don thro' any certain design, as if dubious things were to be confirm'd only by the Canonical Books; so as it is very possible

Canonicósque novi Testamenti libros constitutum esse ab Ecclesia discrimen, præsertim si & illa quoque accedat observatio quod cenfuram nullam Apocryphis adjungant; sed nec aliam aliquam notam unde possit lector colligere minus illos Apocryphis tribuisset, quam veris tribuerint Evangelii. Inde prona est suspicio quaqua forte loca produxerint cum nostris consentientia, nullo tamen certo id factum esse consilio, quo constitutionem fuerat res dubias è Canonicis esse confirmandas; fierique adeo posse ut & illa that that both these and the like Passages may have bin borrow'd from other Gospels besides these we now have. But what need I mention Books that were not Canonical? when indeed it does not appear from those of our Canonical Books which were last written, that the Church knew any thing of the Gospels, or that Clergy-men themselves made a common use of 'em. The Writers of those times do not chequer their Works with Texts of the New Testament, which yet is the Custom of the Moderns, and was also theirs in such Books as they sìmilia ex aliis tamen, quam quæ habemus, deprimta fuerint Evangeliiis. Sed quid ego libros memorem minimè Canonicos? Nè quidem è Canonicis ipsis recentioribus constat Ecclesia innotuiffe Evangelia, atque Ecclesiasticis in usu suffisse vulgari. Non solent illius œvi Scriptores novi Testamenti locis Scripta sua velut opere tessellato ornare, qui tamen recentiorum mos est, qui & suus erat in illis quas agnocebant ipsi acknowledged for Scripture; for they most frequently cite the Books of the Old Testament, and would doubtless have done so by those of the New, if they had then been received as Canonical. St. Paul cites a Saying of our Lord in the Acts of the Apostles; which, if he had it out of any Writing, was not certainly out of these we now have. The Gospels continu'd so conceal'd in those Corners of the World where they were written, that the latter Evangelists knew nothing of what the Precedent wrote: Otherwise there had not been so many apparent Contradictions, which, almost since the first Constitution of the Canon, have exercised the Wits of learned Men. Surely if St. Luke had seen that Genealogy of our Lord which is in St. Matthew, he would not himself have produced one wholly different from the other, without giving the least Reason for this Diversity. And when in the Preface to his Gospel he tells the occasion of his Writing; which is, that he undertook it, being furnished with the Relations of such as were Eye-witnesses of what he writes, he plainly

Ma-

nē tot essent

Canonis constitutione Eruditorum Hominum ingénia exercuerint. Certè Sanctus Lucas si Genealogiam illam Domini in Matthæo vidisset, non aliām ipse, nihilque fere habentem commune, produxisset, nē quidem minima consilia tam diversa edita ratione. Et cum novæ Scriptiorum edit in præfatione causam, quod ipse narrationibus adjutus eam fuerit aggressus, id planè innuit desitutus hoc subsidio fuisset visorum.

intimats, that the Authors of the Gospels which he had seen,
were destitute of this Help: So that neither having seen themselves what they relate, nor with any Care or Diligence consulted such as had seen them,
their Credit was therefore dubious and suspected; whence it must necessarily follow, that the Writers of those Gospels, which Luke had seen, were not at all the same with our present Evangelists. So far Mr. Dodwell; and (excepting the Genuinnes
of the Epistles of Clemens, Bar-Nabas, and the rest; for they are incontestably ancient) I agree with him that the Matters of Fact are à se Evangeliorum auctores, ita nimium non suiffe ipsos auctores at nè quidem auctores cum cura aliqua & se lullate consiluerint, vacillare proinde meritoque dubiam eorum suisse fiderem; ut planè alios suisse necessi: sit Evangelicae Historiae Scritores à Luca visos, à nostris, quos habemus, Evangelistis. Dissert. i. in Iren. 99. 38, 39.

all true; tho' I am far from drawing the same Inference from 'em as he has done, that there is an equal Proof for Episcopacy as for the Canon of Scripture, which is the Testimony of the Fathers of the Second and Third Centuries; and that the Discipline was better known, and preserved than the Doctrine of the Apostles. Whoever has an Inclination to write on this Subject is furnished from this Passage with a great many curious Disquisitions, wherein to shew his Penetration and Judgment, as how the immediate Successors and Disciples of the Apostles could so grossly confound the genuine Writings of their Masters, with such as were falsely attributed to them; or since they were in the dark about these Matters so early, how came such as follow'd 'em by a better Light; why all those Books which are cited by Clemens and the rest should not be counted equally qually Authentic; and what stress should be laid on the Testimony of those Fathers, who not only contradict one another, but are often inconsistent with themselves in their Relations of the very same Facts; with a great many other Difficulties, which deserve a clear resolution from any capable Person, tho' none may safely propose 'em but Mr. Dodwell, who I heartily wish were always as free and unprejudiced as he is really learned.

Thus have I defended and explain'd my self against Mr. Blachall's Accusation: nor do I question but I have given entire Satisfaction to all impartial Men, and lovers of Truth. But there's another sort of People whom I despair of ever contenting. These never fail of finding in the Writings of their Adversary, not what is there, but what they have a mind should be so, to represent him him odious or dangerous. All the Protestations in the World can signify nothing with them; nor is it more safe than otherwise to prove the contrary of what is laid to one's Charge; for they are sagacious enough to discover the hidden Poyson of every Word, and will be sure to give loud warning of the Danger, to shew where the Snake lies in the Grass, and to tell what's in the Belly of the Trojan Horse. But I shall not be in great pain how such People apprehend me, if I have the Happiness to please the moderat and discerning part of Mankind.
MR. BLACKHALL, who, by a public Provocation, would needs engage me in a Controversie about spurious Books, has not confin'd me to expose the Impostures of Antiquity alone, tho' it be pretty plain, that this is Employment enough for one body; but he likewise accuses me of not being more favorable to a Modern Saint, as he is pleas'd to stile King Charles the First. 'That excellent Book, which, he says, was compos'd by himself in the time of his Distresses, will, he supposes, be an ever-everlasting Evidence of his profiting under his Sufferings to after Ages, notwithstanding the Endeavors that have bin formerly us’d to prove it spurious, and the Confidence of a late Writer (the Author of Milton’s Life) asserting it to be so, without either producing any new Evidence for the Proof of his Assertion; or offering one Word in answer to those just and rational Exceptions that had bin made before to those only Testimonies which he insists upon to prove it a Forgery; or making any Exceptions to those later Evidences that have bin produc’d to prove it Authentic.

Whether this Book was compos’d by himself is our Business at present to enquire, and shall be quickly determin’d: for as to his improving by his Sufferings I will not deny what I hope, and Charity commands me to believe.
The Reason why I produc'd no new Evidence to prove the spuriousness of Icon Basilike was, because I thought the old ones sufficient. I vouchsaf'd no Answer to the Exceptions made to those Testimonies, because I neither thought 'em just nor reasonable. And I would not discuss the Facts that have bin since all'd to prove the Book Authentic, because I intended not before to write a just Dissertation on this Subject, and so was not oblig'd to mention all the Particulars relating to it. If Mr. Blackhall does not think this Answer satisfactory, I shall make amends now for all former Omissions; and, being very desirous to content him, will follow that same Method he was pleas'd to chalk me out in his Sermon.

IN the first place therefore, to make this Discourse complete, and that the Evidence of the several Parts whereof it consists, may the better better appear by laying 'em all together, I shall here insert the Abstract which I made of Dr. Walker's Book in Milton's Life, with Anglesey's Memorandum, and the other Testimonies; I shall secondly give particular Answers to the Exceptions that have bin made to all these Pieces: And lastly, shew the invalidity of the Facts which are allledged to prove King Charles the First was the true Author of Icon Basilike. I have not undertaken this Work out of Affection or Opposition to any Party, nor to reflect on the Memory of that unfortunate Prince, whose officious Friends are much more concern'd; but to clear my self from a public Charge, and to discover a pious Fraud, which deserves not to be exempted from Censure for being the Contrivance of a Modern Bishop, no more than those of the ancient Fathers of the Church.
THE Relation of the whole Fact in Milton's Life is after this manner. 'In the Year 1686, Mr. Millington hap'ning to sell the late Lord Anglesey's Library by Auction, put up an Ikon Basilike; and a few bidding very low for it, he had leisure to turn over the Leaves, when to his great Surprize he perceiv'd written with the same noble Lord's own Hand, the following Memorandum.

KING CHARLES the Second, and the Duke of York, did both (in the last Sessions of Parliament, 1675; when I shew'd them in the Lords House the written Copy of this Book, wherein are some Corrections and Alterations written with the late King King Charles the First's own Hand) assure me, that this was none of the said King's compiling, but made by Dr. Gauden Bishop of Exeter; which I here insert for the undeceiving of others in this point, by attesting so much under my own Hand.

Anglesey.

This occasion'd the World to talk; and several knowing the Relation which the late Dr. Anthony Walker, an Essex Divine, had to Bishop Gauden, they inquir'd of him what he knew concerning this Subject, which he then verbally communicated to them: But being afterwards highly provok'd by Dr. Hollingsworth's WORTH'S harsh and injurious Reflecti ons, he was oblig'd in his own Defence to print an Account of that Book, wherein are sufficient Answers to all the Scruples or Objections that can be made, and whereof I here insert an exact Epitome. He tells us in the first place, that Dr. GAUDEN was pleas'd to acquaint him with the whole Design, and shew'd him the Heads of divers Chapters, with some others that were quite finish'd: and that Dr. GAUDEN asking his Opinion of the thing and he declaring his Dissatisfaction that the World should be so impos'd upon, GAUDEN bid him look on the Title, which was the King's Portraiture; for that no Man is suppos'd to draw his own Picture. A very nice Evasi on! he further acquaints us, that some time after this, being both in London, and having din'd together, Dr. GAUDEN took him along along with him to Dr. Duppa the Bishop of Salisbury (whom he made also privy to his Design) to fetch what Papers he had left before for his perusal, or to shew him what he had since written: and that upon their return from that place, after Gauden and Duppa were a while in privat together, the former told him the Bishop of Salisbury wish'd he had thought upon two other Heads, the Ordinance against the Common Pray'r Book, and the denying his Majesty the Attendance of his Chaplains; but that Duppa desir'd him to finish the rest, and he would take upon him to write two Chapters on those Subjects, which accordingly he did. The reason, it seems, why Dr. Gauden himself would not perform this, was, first, that during the Troubles he had for-born the use of the Liturgy, which he did not extraordinarily... admire; and secondly, that he had never bin the King's Chaplain, whereas Dr. Duppa was both his Chaplain, his Tutor, and a Bishop, which made him more concern'd about these Particulars. Thirdly, Dr. Walker informs us that Dr. Gauden told him he had sent a Copy of Icon Basilike by the Marquiss of Hartford to the King in the Isle of Wight; where it was, we may be sure, that he made those Corrections and Alterations with his own Pen, mention'd in my Lord Anglesey's Memorandum: and which gave occasion to som then about him that had accidentally seen, or to whom he had shewn the Book, to believe the whole was his own. Fourthly, Dr. Gauden, after the Restoration, told Dr. Walker, that the Duke of York knew of his being the real Author, and had own'd it to be a great Service; in consideration of which, it may be, the the Bishoprick of Winchester, tho' he was afterwards put off with that of Worcester was promis'd him. And, notwithstanding it was then a Secret, we now know that in expectation of this Translation, the great House on Clapham Common was built indeed in the Name of his Brother Sir Denys, but really to be a Mansion-house for the Bishops of Winchester. Fifthly, Dr. Walker, says, that Mr. Gauden the Doctor's Son, his Wife, himself, and Mr. Gifford who transcrib'd it, did believe it as firmly as any Fact don in the place where they were; and that in that Family they always spoke of it among themselves (whether in Dr. Gauden's Presence or Absence) as undoubtedly written by him, which he never contradicted. We learn, Sixthly, that Dr. Gauden, after part of it was printed, gave to Dr. Walker with his own Hand what what was last sent to London; and after shewing him what it was, seal'd it, giving him cautionary Directions how to deliver it, which he did on Saturday the 23d of December, 1648. for Mr. Royston the Printer, to Mr. Peacock Brother to Dr. Gauden's Steward, who, after the Impression was finish'd, gave him, for his Trouble, six Books, whereof he always kept one by him. To these Particulars Dr. Walker adds, that the Reason why the Covenant is more favorably mention'd in Ikon Basilike, than the King or any other of his Party would do, was because Dr. Gauden himself had taken it: That in the Devotional part of this Book there occur several Expressions which were habitual to Gauden in his Prayers, which always in privat and public were conceiv'd or extemporary; and that to his Knowledge it was Dr.
Dr. Gauden, being best acquainted with the Beauty of his own Sayings, who made that Collection of Sentences out of Ikon Basilike, intitul'd, Apophthegmata Caroliniana. These and some Observations about the same individual Persons variation of Stile on different Subjects, with the facility and frequency of personating others, may be further consider'd in Dr. Walker's Original Account. In this condition stood the Reputation of this Book, till the last and finishing discovery of the Imposture was made after this manner. Mr. Arthur North, a Merchant now living on Tower-hill, London, a Man of good Credit, and a Member of the Church of England, marry'd the Sister of her that was Wife to the Doctor's Son, Charles Gauden, who dying, left som Papers with his Widow, among which Mr. North, being concern'd about his Sister in Law's Affairs, found a whole Bundle relating to Ikon Basilike: These Papers old Mrs. Gauden left to her darling Son John, and he to his Brother Charles. There is first a Letter from Secretary Nicholas to Dr. Gauden.
A M Y N T O R.

2. The Copy of a Letter from Bishop Gauden to Chancellor Hyde, where, among his other Deserts, he pleads that what was done like a King, should have a Kinglike Retribution; and that his design in it was to comfort and encourage the King's Friends, to expose his Enemies, and to convert, &c.

There is, 3. The Copy of a Letter from the Bishop to the Duke of York, wherein he strongly urges his Services.

4. A Letter under Chancellor Hyde's own Hand, dated the 13th of March, 1661, wherein he expresses his uneasiness under the Bishop's importunity, and excuses his inability lity yet to serve him: but towards the Conclusion it contains these remarkable Words: The Particular you mention has indeed been imparted to me as a Secret; I am sorry I ever knew it: and when it ceases to be a Secret, it will please none but Mr. Milton. There are other Papers in this Bundle, but particularly a long Narrative of Mrs. Gauden's own writing, irre-fragably shewing her Husband to be Author of Ikon Basilike. It entirely confirms Dr. Walker's Account, and contains most of the Facts we have hitherto related, with many other curious Circumstances too long to be here inserted, yet too extraordinary not to be known; wherfore I refer the Reader to the Original Paper, or to the faithful Extract made out of it before several learned and worthy Persons, and which is printed in a Paper intitul'd, Truth brought to Light.
AMYNTOR.

Thus
Thus came all the World to be convinc'd of this notorious Imposture; which as it was dexterously contriv'd, and most cunningly improv'd by a Party whose Interest oblig'd 'em to keep the Secret, so it happen'd to be discover'd by very nice and unforeseen Accidents. Had not Gauden bin disappointed of Winchester, he had never pleaded his Merit in this Affair; nor would his Wife have written her Narrative, had King Charles the Second bestow'd one half Years Rent on her after her Husband's decease; which, upon her Petition, and considering her numerous Family, none could imagi-gin should be refus'd. It was a slighter Accident that begot a
a Confession from two Kings, and Charles's own Sons. And I doubt if any other than one of Mr. Millington's great Curiosity, and no Bigotry, had the dispo-fal
fal of my Lord Anglesey's Books, we should never have heard of the Memorandum. Had not Dr. Hollingworth's indiscreet Zeal provok'd the only Man then alive who had any personal knowledg of this Business, Dr. Walker had never publish'd his Account; nor would the whole Discovery be so complete, without the least Intricacy or Question, without Mr. North's Papers.

THIS is the complete History of Ikon Basilike, as it is suppos'd to be a Forgery; and we must next proceed to examin the Exceptions made to it, as they are collected by Mr. Wagstaff in his Vindicati-of King Charles the Martyr. To begin with my Lord Anglesey's Memorandum, 'tis urg'd, that it does not particularly express by the Date whether it meant the last Session of Parliament before the writing of it, or the last Session of the Year 75. when it is plain that he meant the last or Winter Session; and that it was therefore the immediate Session
preceding the writing of this Me-memorandum. To say that there is no Witness to it is a very singular sort of Objection, when his Lordships Relations, and all that have seen this and his other Writings, own it to be his Hand. It is not likely that there were any Wittnesses of the Royal Brother’s tel-lring him their Opinion of Icon Bas-like: Nor is there any thing more common than for learned or great Men to leave such Memorandums
in a Book concerning the Author of it when it was a Question, or about any other Secret relating to it, which they thought they had discover’d; and yet ’tis a thing unheard till now, that they were deny’d to be theirs whose Names
they bear, because the Day of the Month was not mention’d, nor the Names
Names of any Witnesses added, when the Hand was confess'd to be the same with their other Writings. Many instances of this kind appear in the Books of Mr. Hammond lately sold, and whereof I have som to shew, as in the Book intitul'd, Apollonii Grallæ, he writes, that Lansbergius was the Author of it, of whom he there gives a Character.

IT is no just Exception to this Memorandum, that my Lord Anglesey did not communicat the Contents of it to any of his Friends or Relations: for tho' the Two Royal Brothers imparted the Secret to him, it does by no means follow, that they intended he should publish it to the World. And supposing they did not oblige him to silence, yet 'tis probable that his Lordship was not very fond of being disturb'd by the Clamors of som Churchmen, who carry'd things so high at that time; that I do not believe they would pardon such a Discovery to either of the Brothers themselves. There was never any poor Prince more notoriously abus'd by many of those he took for his best Friends than Charles the First. They put him on all those unhappy Measures which prov'd his Ruin in the end. And as they made use of his Temper to serve their own Purposes when he was alive, so they did of his Name for the same Reason after his Death. They were not concern'd so much for his Honor, as their own Interest; and having contriv'd this Forgery to carry their Cause, they thought themselves afterwards oblig'd to support it. Mr. Wagstaff affirms that there is no presumption that the Royal Brothers communicated this Affair to any other Person besides my Lord Anglesey, which is a negative Argument, and proves nothing. 'Tis possible enough that my my Lord Anglesey himself told of this to others, tho' they may be since dead, or are not willing to tell it again. If the Royal Brothers had spoke of it to no body else, it follows not that a Secret was never committed to one, because it was not to more; as if it were necessary for a Man to call Witnesses that he imparted a Secret to his Friend. But we shall presently alledge more than a Presumption, that both King Charles the Second and the late King James declar'd their Opinion to other People besides my Lord Anglesey, that Icon Basilike was not their Father's Book.

By such nice Cavils against the Memorandum we can easily judg of the Exceptions we may expect to Dr. Walker's Account. That Gauden hop'd o make a Fortune by this Book, as well as to promote the Cause of the Church, ought by no means to
to be counted strange; for who is it, pray, that serves the King any more than God, for nought? Have not most of the Bishops and other Clergymen of those times, that either liv'd depriv'd here in England, or that accompany'd Charles the Second in his Exile, pleaded their Loyalty, and magnify'd their Services at the Restoration, as many others would questionless do, if King James should ever return again? Were not great Persons employ'd to solicit and make an Interest for them? And, in a Word, are not Divines obser'd to make the same Steps, and take the same Measures that all other sorts of Men do to get Preferment. I should rather doubt that Dr. Gauden was not the Author of this Forgery, if he had not expected a Reward for it from Charles the Second; for 'tis certain, that the Credit of Icon Basilike contributed more to his Establishment.
blishment than any other single Motive whatsoever. But 'tis well known that this Prince was not the kindest in the World to his Father's Friends, who would too often forget his own; and that it was not the Interest of some People to have this business unravell'd, tho' their impolitic Conduct has bin since the occasion of divulging what every body suspected before.

THE Immorality of this Forgery is urg'd as an Argument against it; and, if it could by any means hold Water, is indeed an Argument worth a Million. Then it would clearly follow that because it was a most immoral thing to ly for God, and to forge Books, Epistles, or the like, under the Names of Christ and his Apostles, there were therefore never any such Pieces; and that because it was an ill thing to feign Miracles, or to destroy Mens Lives Lives for the Advancement of Religion, there never was therefore any Priestcraft, nor any of these infamous Practices known in the World. But if the contrary be as clear as the Day, I believe Men might be found that would make as bold with the Name of King Charles, as others have done with that of King Jesus. Mr. Wastaf knows, tho' Mr. Blackhall does not, that Tertullian tells us of a certain Presbyter of Asia, who when he was accused of having forg'd a Book containing the Travels of Paul and Thecla, confessed the Fact, and alleged that he did it for the love of Paul, and I say, that Dr. Gauden wrote Icon Basilike for the Church's sake, the King's, and his own.

* De Baptismo, c. 17. etiam Hieronym. in Catalogo Scriptor. Eccl.:
AMYNTOR. 105

As for the plausible Accounts given in that Book of the King's Secret Intentions, his particular Troubles, his Remorses of Consciences, and the like, it is very ridiculous to alledge 'em as an Argument of the Genuineness of it, when the Book was written for that very end. For the Design of the Author was to give such a Color to all the King's Actions, and to tell such fine things of his gracious Purposes, as would beget a better Opinion of him in the Readers Mind, and move his Indignation against the Parliament, or Compassion of his Misfortunes. But that Dr. Gauden has frequently made the King's Thoughts to contradict his Actions, is evident to any Man that has both read Icon Basilike, and the History of those times: And this Subject is thro'ly handled by John Milton in his Iconoclastes, to which I refer those who want Satisfaction.

BUT
BUT there is an Objection still behind, and as strong, be sure, as any of the rest, which is that Dr. Walker did not see Dr. Gauden write this Book, nor tells us that it was in his own Hand. But I believe Mr. Wagstaff is the only Man living that questions whether Dr. Walker meant Dr. Gauden's own Writing, when he says, that before the whole was finish'd Dr. Gauden was pleas'd to acquaint him with his Design, and shew him the Heads of diverse Chapters, with som of the Discourses written of them, and that Mr. Gifford transcrib'd a Copy of it. This is all that can be said of any Author in the World: and if Dr. Walker had said more expressly, or rather superfluously, that it was likewise D. Gauden's Handwriting, we should then have bin told, that it was a Transcript from the King's Copy in the Hands of Mr. Symonds, of which more hereafter.
W E proceed now to those Pieces commonly call'd Mr. North's Papers, he being the Discoverer. Chancellor Hyde in his Letter to Dr. Gauden, tells him, as was said before, 'That the Particular he mention'd had indeed bin imparted to him as a Secret, which he was sorry he ever knew; and that when it ceased to be a Secret, it would please none but Mr. Milton. Was there no other Secret in the World but this, says Mr. Wagstaff, that the divulging of it would gratify Mr. Milton? Yes doubtless; but I believe not one that would please none but Mr. Milton, as the Chancellor expresses it: For he having particularly question'd the Genuinness of this Book, and offer'd a fair Proof of the Spuriousness thereof from intrinsic Evidence only, without any further Light; would be extremly pleas'd to find his Reasonings and Judgment confirm'd by undeniable Mat-
Matters of Fact. Nor does any indifferent Person in the World understand this Passage otherwise than weighs Dr. Gauden's Pretences with Mr. Milton's Concern, and considers that Mrs. Gauden put this and the other Papers relating to Icon Basilike in one Bundle, together with her own Narrative, for the Information of her Son. Besides that all those who ever saw other Writings of the Chancellor own this to be his Hand, and particularly his eldest Son, the present Earl of Clarendon, as Mr. Wagstaff himself acknowledges.

BUT he says, 'That my Lord Clarendon, (from whom he had it in a Letter) by leave of the King and Queen preparing to attend his Father in France in the beginning of the Summer, 1674. his Lordship went first to Farnham to the late Bishop of Winton the 14th of May, and among several things he had in Charge from the Bishop to his Father, he had him tell him, that the King had very ill People about him, who turn'd all things into Ridicule; that they endeavor'd to bring him to have a mean Opinion of the King his Father, and to persuade him that he was not the Author of the Book which goes under his Name. And (when after his Lordship's Arrival in France, the 30th. of the same Month, he had deliver'd his Father these Particulars among others) to that concerning the Book, his Father reply'd, Good God! I thought the Marquiss of Hartford had satisfy'd the King in that Matter. From hence Mr. Wagstaff would infer, that my Lord Chancellor did not believe any other besides Charles the First to be the Author of Icon Basilike, and that he wondered any should go about to induce Charles the Second to question it. But for my part I think it very plain on on the contrary, that he believ'd
King Charles the First not to be the Author of that Book, and wondred that King Charles the Second should not understand so much from the Marquiss of Hartford, who, as Dr. Walker, and Mrs. Gauden inform us, was the Person that carry'd the Manuscript to the King in the Isle of Wight, and so next to Dr. Gauden himself, was best able to convince his Son of the Truth. Moreover, how could the Bishop of Winton imagin that the ill People about Charles the Second could bring him to doubt of his Father's being the Author of Icon Baslike, if he really knew it to be written by him? when upon this Supposition he was rather capable of satisfying all those who had any Scruples in this Affair.

A S for Dr. Gauden's great Services, and his saying in a Letter to the Chancellor, 'That what was 'don like a King, should have a King-
'Kinglike Retribution, Mr. Wagstaff says that those are Mystical Expressions, and that by them he might probably mean a Book he wrote against the Covenant, and a Protestation he published against the King's Death, neither of which could be termed such extraordinary Services, when many others had done the same, and more: much less could it be said that either of these Books was done like a King, or deserved a Kinglike Retribution; whereas Mr. Wagstaff, and those who are of his Opinion, maintain that the Stile and Matter of Icon Basilike are so like a King's, that no Subject could possibly write it: but a Multitude of others agree with me, that the Stile is infinitely liker that of a Doctor than a King.

LASTLY, It is objected that Dr. Walker's and Mrs. Gauden's Testimonies contradict one another. But how? Dr. Walker says, that Dr. Gauden told him he did not know if if Charles the First had seen the Book: but Mrs. Gauden affirms, that the Marquiss of Hartford told her Husband the King had seen and approv'd it, both which Assertions are consistent enough together. For Dr. Gauden might be ignorant that the King had seen it, when Dr. Walker askt him that Question, who perhaps never mention'd it to him again in their Discourses about this Matter, or might easily forget it, as he says he did several other Particulars, little foreseeing he should ever be oblig'd to make this Discovery: and besides we must upon all Accounts allow his Wife to know more Circumstances of this Business, as of most others, than his Friend. The next suppos'd Contradiction is, that Dr. Walker says Dr. Gauden once told him, after the Restoration, that he did not positively and certainly know if King Charles the Second knew he wrote Icon Basilike, tho' he believ'd he he might, because the Duke of York did, who own'd it to have bin a seasonable and acceptable Service. But Mrs. Gauden affirms, that her Husband acquaint'd the King with it himself, which is very true. But pray, let us examin at what time. After his Discourse with Dr. Walker most certainly: For does she not in clear and direct Terms say, that it was in his last Sickness, which prov'd Mortal to him; and that the Reason of it was, because he saw some Persons who were privy to it desire nothing more than to have it conceal'd, which he was not willing it should be in consideration of his numerous Family, to whom it might sometime or other do seasonable Service?

NOW that no Mistakes may be occasion'd hereafter by imperfect Fragments of Mrs. Gauden's.
DEN's Narrative, and that this Affair may be set in the clearest Light, I shall, before I proceed to the Examination of the positive Testimonies produc'd for the King, insert the Narrative here at large, as it was exactly copy'd from the Original, to which the curious are refer'd.
Mrs. GAUDEN's

NARRATIVE.

My Husband understanding the great Value and Esteem the People had of Cromwell and of others in the Army, occasion'd by the high Opinion which they had of their Parts, and Piety; he being also well assur'd, that one of the main Designs of those wicked Politicians, was to Eclipse his Majesty that then was, as much as might be, and to give a false Misrepresentation of him to the World; he, that he might do his Majesty right, did pen that Book which goes by the Name of the King's-Book. The Title which he gave it then was Suspiria Regalia; and the Design was to have it put forth as by som Person who had found the Papers in his Majesty's Chambers at Holmeby, being by chance left or scatter'd there. And to this purpose he had prefix'd an Epistle, which might be suppos'd to be written by that Person, who having found them by that Accident, thought it not fit to conceal them. His Design also in the Book, was to give such a Character of her Majesty to the World, as her great Worth, extream Merits, and admirable Endowments deserv'd. when my Husband had writ it, he shew'd it to my Lord Capel, who did very highly approve of it; and though he thought it would do very well to have it printed, yet he said it was not fit to do so without his Majesty's Approbation; and to come to speak to his Majesty in private was then impossible, in regard of the strict Guard which they kept kept about him. Immediately after this there was a Treaty with his Majesty at the Isle of Wight, whereupon my Husband went to my Lord Marquiss of Hartford that then was, and to him deliver'd the Manuscript, and he deliver'd it to the King at the Isle of Wight, and likewise told him who the Author was. When my Lord Marquiss return'd, my Husband went to him, to whom my Lord said, That his Majesty having had some of those Essays read to him by Bishop Duppa, did exceedingly approve of them, and asked whether they could not be put out in some other Name. The Bishop reply'd, that the Design was, that the World should take them to be his Majesty's. Whereupon his Majesty desir'd time to consider of it; and this (says my Lord) is all the Account I can give of it: What is become of the Manuscript I know not.
and what will become of his Majesty God knows. Upon this my Husband told my Lord Marquis, That, in his Opinion, there was no way so probable to save his Majesty's Life, as by endeavouring to move the Hearts and Affections of the People as much as might be towards him; and that he also thought that that Book would be very effectual for that purpose. Then my Lord bad my Husband to do what he would, in regard the Case was desperate. Then immediately my Husband resolv'd to print it with all speed that might be, he having a Copy of that which he sent to the King, and that he printed was just the same, only he then added, the Essay upon their denying his Majesty the Attendance of his Chaplains, and the Meditation of Death, after the Votes of the Non-adressses, and his Majesty's close Im.
Imprisonment at Carisbrook Castle. Now the Instrument which my Husband employ'd to get it printed, was one Mr. Simmonds, a Divine, and a great Sufferer for his Majesty; and he got one Mr. Royston to print it; which Royston never knew any thing but that it was of his Majesty's own penning: my Husband did then alter the Title of it, and call'd it Icon Basilike. Now when it was about half printed, they, who were in power, found the Press where it was printing, and likewise a Letter of my Husband's, which he sent up to the Press; whereupon they destroy'd all that they then found printed, but could not find out from whence the Letter came, in regard it had no Name to it. Notwithstanding all this, my Husband attempted the printing of it again, but could by no means get it finish'd till som few Days Days after his Majesty was destroyed. When it was com out, they who were then in Power were not only extremely displeased at it, but also infinitely solicitous to find out the Author of it, thinking it very improbable that his Majesty should write it, in regard of the great Disturbances and Troubles which for many Years he had suffer'd: or at least impossible that he should have writ it all; for after the Attendance of his Chaplains was deny'd him, and he a close Prisoner, they well understood that he could not write any thing without their Discovery. They also took that very Manuscript which my Husband had sent his Majesty, and saw that it was none of his Majesty's Handwriting. Upon this they appointed a Committee to examin the Business; of which my Husband having notice, he went privately in the Night away from his own own House to Sir John Wentworth's, who liv'd near Yarmouth, and him he acquainted with the Business, and the great Danger
he was then in: when Sir John did not only promise to conceal him, but also to convey him out of England, it being in his Power to give Passes to go beyond Sea. About this time Mr. Symmonds was taken in a Disguise;
but God in his Providence so or-der'd it, that he sickned immediatly, and dy'd before he came to his Examination: nor could the Committee find out any thing by any means whatever;
which alter'd my Husband's Resolutions of going out of England.
Now, besides these Circumstances, to assert the Truth of what I say, I can produce som Letters, which, I am sure, will put it out of all Dispute. My Husband continu'd at Bocking till the return of his Majesty King Charles the Se-
Second; and upon his Restoration, knowing his Princely Disposition, did not unjustly expect a suitable Reward for his Endeavors to serve his Majesty's Father and himself in that Book. And meeting with Dr. Morley, he fell into Discourse how sensible he was of the great Service which he had don his present Majesty and the Royal Family, in composing and setting forth that excellent Piece, call'd the King's Book; and also assur'd him, that it had bin very effectual not only at home, but abroad, to move the Hearts and Affections of People towards his Majesty, instancing in several Persons who were most exceedingly affected with it; and so advantageous he said it had bin to his Majesty, that according to his great Merit, he might have what Preferment he desir'd. Dr. Morley also told him, That he had acquainted Sir Edward Hyde with the Business, and that he did very much commend and admire it: but we have not (said he) acquainted his Majesty with it, but did assure him, that his Majesty did set a high Value upon the Book, and had commanded Dr. Earl to translate into Latin; from having taken the Pains to put it into other Languages before. My Husband being encouraged by this Discourse of Dr. Morley's, and shortly after meeting with Dr. Sheldon (who he knew was not ignorant that he was the only Author of the forementioned Book) he told Dr. Sheldon, that since he had bin inform'd that his Majesty, out of his Princely Disposition, would (without doubt) when once acquainted with it, reward that Service which he had endeavor'd to do his Father and himself; he thought it most convenient for himself, and also that he might be be serviceable to his Majesty in the Diocess of London (a Place where he was well known) if it would please his Majesty to make him Bishop of that See. Dr. Sheldon was pleas'd, with a great deal of Gravity to tell him that was a great Leap at first. Whereupon my Husband desisted, and was resolv'd to leave his Preferment to God's dispose. Soon after this, the King being still ignorant of what he had done, he was by the Mediation of a Person perfectly ignorant of his Merit as to this Matter, made Bishop of Exeter; all the considerable Bishopricks being otherwise dispos'd of. Not long after this it pleas'd God to visit my Husband with an Infirmity, which he had great cause to fear would (as it did) prove mortal to him. This made him resolve to acquaint the King with the whole Matter, and the rather, because he saw som Persons who were privy to it, it, desir'd nothing more than to have it conceal'd, and bury'd in Oblivion: but my Husband was not willing it should be so, in regard he had at that time four Sons living; and they (he thought) if he should die, might be capable of his Majesty's favour. Besides, the Duke of Somerset was dead, and the Bishop of Winchester (the Person who was best able to attest it) was very ill. These Considerations made him go to his Majesty; and having the Opportunity of discoursing privately with him, he told him the whole Matter as I have related it, and for the Truth of it, appeal'd to Dr. Duppa, then Bishop of Winchester, and formerly his Majesty's Tutor. The King then was pleas'd to entertain some Discourse with my Husband about it, and said that he did often wonder how his Father should have gotten Time
Time and Privacy enough in his Troubles to compose so excellent a Piece, and written with so much Learning.

BY the Extract that was publish'd of this Narrative it would seem as if it were somewhat longer; but this is all that came to my Hands, two Witnesses attesting, that as far as it goes, it is exactly conformable to the Original. What Accident hinder'd the rest (if there be any) from being copy'd, I cannot certainly tell; tho', when ever I com by a true Information, I shall (if Occasion be) publish my Knowledg of that Particular, in an Appendix to this Book. The Substance of what remains in the Abstract, is, That when King Charles the Second (as we saw but now) was made acquainted with this Mystery, he gave a Promise to Dr. Gauden of the Bishoprick of Winchester;
AMYNTOR. 127

"Chefter; and that the Duke of York had also assur'd him of his Favor: That upon Dr. Duppa's Death, tho' Dr. Gauden put the King in mind of his Promise, he was only made Bishop of Worcester, Dr. Morley having obtain'd the See of Winchester: That her Husband dying soon after, Mrs. Gauden petition'd the King, shewing that she was left a Widow, with four Sons and a Daughter; that it cost her Husband 200l. to remove from Exeter to Worcester; and pray'd his Majesty to bestow the half years Rents upon her, which he deny'd, and gave them to another.

We learn further from Dr. Walker, that immediatly upon Dr. Gauden's Nomination to the Bishoprick of Worcester, he told him, that waiting upon the King the next Morning after the Bishop of Winchester's Death, he found a remarkable Alteration in him, his Ma-Majesty being pensive and out of Humor; in which Temper he still found him for two Mornings after: But having learnt the third Day that my Lord Chancellor had by all his Interest press'd the King to bestow Winchester on Dr. Morley, he presum'd to tell his Majesty how uneasie he perceiv'd him to be between the Honor of his Word that he shou'd succeed his Friend Dr. Duppa, and the Importunity of those who solicited for Dr. Morley; and that therfore he most willingly releas'd his Majesty of his Promise. Here, continues Dr. Gauden, the King stoppt me, and vouchsaf'd to embrace me in his Arms, with these Expressions; My Lord, I thank you; and it may not be long 'ere I have Opportunity to shew you how kindly I take it. And in the mean time you shall have Worcester; and, to make it to you as good as I can, all the Dignities of
of that Church (I know not how it comes to pass) being in my Disposal, I give you the disposing of them all during your time, that you may prefer your Friends, and have them near about you.

It was an ordinary thing with King Charles the Second thus to forget his Promises, which made him frequently uneasy, and occasion'd Sir William Temple (whom he had serv'd after this manner) to say of him in his incomparable Memoirs, 'That this Temper made him apt to fall into the Persuasions of whoever had his Kindness and Confidence for the time, how different soever from the Opinions he was of before: and that he was very easie to change Hands, when those he imploy'd seem'd to have engag'd him in any Difficulties; so as nothing lookt steddy in the Conduct of his Affairs, nor aim'd at any certain end.
THUS we have don with the Narrative of Mrs. Gauden, who was often heard to relate the substance of it to her Friends and Relations, and who, when Dr. Nicholson, then Bishop of Gloucester, did, on her receiving of the Sacrament, put the Question to her, affirm'd, that her Husband wrote that Book, which several now living in that City do very well remember.

WE come at length to the last Period of our Labor, and that is to shew the Invalidity of the Facts which are alledg'd to prove Charles the First was the true Author of Icon Basilike. And the first Evidence we shall hear is his own Son and Successor, Charles II. who granted his Letters Patents to Mr. Royston for printing all his Father's Works, and particularly this Piece, which, which, says Mr. Wagstaff, contradicts what he's believ'd to have said to my Lord Anglesey. But with his good leave the Conclusion does not follow: for these Letters were issu'd out in the Year 60, before Dr. Gauden gave the King true Information; and it was in 75, that he told his Opinion to my Lord Anglesey long after he was convinc'd that his Father had not written the Book. But if King Charles the Second had dissembled his Knowledge of this Affair, it had not bin at all a thing inconsistent with this Character, but a Piece of his Grandfather's boasted Kingcraft, and which he practic'd on many less pardonable Occasions. Have not Princes in all Ages, as well as other Men, bin allow'd to keep things secret which it was not their Interest should be known, and which are commonly call'd by the Name of State Mysteries? How many Juggles are us'd by the Eastern Princes to beget an extraordinary Opinion of their Persons in the Minds of their Subjects, who, by the force of such fantastical Stories, carry their Respect even to Adoration? But what need I go out of England for Examples? When our own Kings have for so many Ages pretended to cure the King’s Evil, by merely touching the affected Part; and this Power of Healing is said to be communicated to them by the Blessing of King Edward the Confessor, one of the weakest and most Priest ridden Princes that ever wore a Crown. All the Monkish Historians, and particularly the Abbot of Rievalle, who wrote his Life, have given us a large Catalogue of his Miracles: but I wonder why our Princes have not also pretended to restore Sight to the Blind; for this is also affirm’d of King Edward’s Wonder working Touch. ’Tis strange, that a Protestant Bishop, should compose a Form of Divine Service to be read on this Occasion, when he might as warrantably believe all the other Legends of those dark and ignorant times. If I did persuade my self that King CHARLES the Second (who is said to have cur'd very many) was a Saint, it should be the greatest Miracle I could believe. But King WILLIAM, who came to deliver us from Superstition as well as from Slavery, has now abolisht this Remnant of Popery: For it is not, as his Enemies suggest, because he thinks his Title, which is the best in the World, defective, that he abstains from Touching; but because he laughs at the Folly, and scorns to take the Advantage of the Fraud. So much for the Letters Patents of CHARLES II. and we shall consider those of the late King JAMES in their due order.

THE next Witness shall be Major HUNTINGTON, who (as Sir W. } William Dugdale relates in his Short View of the Troubles of England did, thro' the Favor of General Fairfax, restore to King Charles the First, after he was brought to Hampton-Court, the Manuscript of Icon Basilike written with the said King's own Hand, and found in his Cabinet at Naseby Fight. By the way, they should have said, for the Grace of the Story, part of the Manuscript; for a good deal of the Book was written afterwards, be the Author who you please. And they should have told us likewise how General Fairfax durst send one part of his Papers to the King, when he sent the rest to the Parliament; or, since they would make us believe he was so kind to the King, why he did not restore him all the Papers, when 'tis very evident, that those which the Parliament order'd to be publish'd were infinitely of greater consequence, and made him a world world of Enemies, which oblig'd the Author of Icon Bafilike to write a Chapter on this very Subject; whereas the Papers in question would probably mollify som of his Opposers. But now when all is don, tho' General Fairfax was afterwards against putting the King to death, yet he was not at that time dispos'd to grant him any Favors, and acted with as hearty Zeal against him as any in the Nation, which appears by all the Histories of those times, as well as by his own and the Memoirs of the Lord Hollis. As for Major Huntington Dr. Walker assures us, 'That he told him, when he heard such a Book was publish'd and confidently reported to be the Kings, all he said was that he surely believ'd those were the Papers he saw him so usually take out of his Cabinet, and that he never read one Line or Word of them. This and Sir William Dugdale's Testi-Testimony are diverse from that of Mr. Richard Duke, of Otterton in Devon, who writes the following Letter to Dr. Goodal, famous for his Zeal on the behalf of Icon Basilike. 'Sir, I confess that I heard Major Huntington to say more than once, that whilst he guarded Charles the First at Holmby-House (as I remember) he saw several Chapters or Leaves of that great King's Meditations lying on the Table several Mornings, with a Pen and Ink with which the King scratch'd out or blotted some Lines or Words of some of them. Upon which I must also confess that I concluded they were originally from the King; but others have drawn a contrary Argument from the King's correcting the Papers. Yet I put this under my Hand, that the Major told me, that he did suppose them originally from that learned Prince, which is the Totum that can be intimated from, Sir, your humble Servant Richard Duke.
AMYNTOR. 137

Then one Mr. Cave Beck writes to Dr. Hollingworth, 'That Major Huntington at Ipswich assurance'd him that so much of the said Book as contain'd his Majesty's Mediations before Naseby-Fight was taken in the King's Cabinet; and that Sir Thomas Fairfax deliver'd the said Papers to him, and order'd him to carry them to the King; and also told him, that when he deliver'd them to the King, his Majesty appear'd very joyful, and said he esteem'd 'em more than all the Jewels he had lost in the Cabinet. This Major Huntington was a strange Man to vary so often in his Story, and to tell so much more or less to every body that enquir'd of him; but indeed 'tis no great Wonder that these Gentlemen should so widely differ from one another, both as to Time
Time and Place, as well as to Matters of Fact, when Sir William Dugdale has printed under Major Huntington’s Name quite another Story from the written Memorial out of which he had it. In his short View he positively says, as we read before, that the Manuscript was written with the King’s own Hand: But in his Warrant for this, it is only said, as Mr. Wagstaff himself acknowledges, that all the Chapters in it were written by the Hand of Sir Edward Walker, but much corrected with Interlineations of the King’s Hand, and that the Prayers were all so.

NOW, to shew further how cautiously People should rely on Sir William Dugdale, and Historians like him, we shall produce another remarkable Instance. In the Book before-quoted, he expressly writes, That Mr. Herbert did often see the Icon Basilike while he he waited on the King in the Isle of Wight; whereas all that Sir Thomas (for he was Knighted after the Restoration) has said in the Manuscript which Sir William perus'd, and wherof Mr. Wagstaff has printed an Abstract, is, that he 'had there the Charge of the King's Books; and that those he most read, 'after the Sacred Scriptures, were 'Bishop Andrew's Sermons, Hooker's Ecclesiastical Policy, Villalpandus on Ezekiel, Sandy's Paraphrase 'on the Psalms, Herbert's Poems, 'the Translation of Godfrey of 'Bulloign by Mr. Fairfax, of Orlando Furioso by Sir John Harrington, and Spencer's Fairy 'Queen (to which he might have 'added Pembroke's Arcadia.) And 'at this time it was, as is presum'd, ' (continues Sir Thomas ) that he 'compos'd his Book, call'd Suspiria 'Regalia, publish'd soon after his 'Death, and entitul'd, The King's 'Portraiture in his Solitudes and Sufferings: which Manuscript Mr. Herbert found among those Books his Majesty was pleas’d to give him, those excepted which he bequeath’d to his Children hereafter mention’d. In regard Mr. Herbert, tho’ he did not see the King write that Book, his Majesty being always privat when he writ; and those his Servants never coming into the Bed Chamber when the King was privat, til he call’d; yet comparing it with his Hand-writing in other things, he found it so very like as induces his Belief that it was his own, having seen much of the King’s Writings before. Here Sir Thomas only presumes the King might write the Book in the Isle of Wight, and directly says he never saw the King write it, nor the Book it self till after his Death; but Sir William affirms from these very Papers (for they are said to be written at his Request by Sir Tho-that he often saw it in the Isle of Wight when he waited on the King in his Bed-Chamber. 'Tis to be observ'd, that the Title of Suspiria Regalia is as agreeable to Mrs. Gauden's Narrative, as the rest of the Particulars are different from Sir William's Relation.

Before we examin the Force of Sir Thomas's Testimony, we must first consider what is said by Mr. Levet, who attended the King at the same Time and Place. In short, he says, 'That of his own certain Knowledg he can deposite the Book was truly the Kings, having observ'd his Majesty oftentimes writing his Royal 'Resentments of the bold and insolent Behavior of his Soldiers 'when they had him in their Custody: That being nominated by 'his Majesty to be one of his 'Servants during the Treaty in the 'Isle of Wight, he had the Happiness to read the same oftentimes in Manuscript under his Majesty's own Hand, being pleas'd to leave it in the Window of his Bed-Chamber: And that when the King was remov'd to Hurst-Castle, he had the Charge of this Book, and a Cabinet of other Papers, which at the said Castle he deliver'd again to his Majesty; where, by the way, he does not inform us if the Book was distinctly given him from the Cabinet, or that he only conclude'd it was in it. Here are several very observable Circumstances: As, First, that altho' Mr. Herbert who was of the King's Bed-Chamber, never saw him write a Syllable of this Book, his (Majesty, he says, being always in privat, when he wrote, and his Servants never coming into his Bed-Chamber till he call'd; yet Mr. Levet, a Page of the Back Stairs, often saw him write, knew what he wrote, and could read the Book when he pleas'd.
pleas'd. Then that the King, who is said to value this Book more than all his Jewels, should so carelessly leave it in his Bed-chamber when he was abroad, and where Mr. Herbert and others, nay the very Soldiers might see it as well as Mr. Levet, is not very likely. And lastly, that the King should have so much leisure to mind this Book during a Treaty with his Subjects, or would lose any time in writing of it, when the Business in agitation concern'd no less than his re-establishment or Abdication, is not credible; besides, that there is nothing particularly written concerning the Insolence of the Soldiers in all Icon Basilike. And I have talk'd with Persons of Quality and good Reputation now alive, who had much more of his Majesty's Company and Confidence in the Isle of Wight than Mr. Levet either shar'd, or could reasonably expect; but yet they neither dreamt dreamt of this Business then, nor believ’d a jot of it afterwards, as well knowing how the King spent his time in that place. But now supposing Mr. Levet’s Relation to be all true, yet it is very far from amounting to a Proof, that King Charles the First was the real Author of Icon Basilike, which is the Point in question; and not whether he interlin’d or transcrib’d it, which he ought to have don, if he had a mind it should pass for his own: besides that Dr. Gauden sent it to him for that very purpose, to be corrected, allow’d, or laid aside, as his Majesty should think fit. But tho’ the King in all reason might, and I really believe did, correct or interline a part, and perhaps transcribe the whole Book; yet I can by no means be persuaded that he could find Leisure enough to write so many Copies of it in his Solitudes and Sufferings, in the midst midst of Treaties, in the Hurry of Removals, while he meditated his Escape, and was strictly observ'd by his Guards. But these Gentlemen tell us of as many Copies, as the Papists shew Heads of St. John Baptist, or Quarts of the Virgin Mary's Milk. Mr. Herbert had one left him by the King for a Legacy; Charles the Second (as Dr. Canarifs writes to Mr. Wagstaff) shew'd another to Mr. Wood, a Commissioner from the Scotch Kirk at Breda; and who knows which of these, or whether it was either of them, that Mr. Levet deliver'd to the King at Hurst-Castle? But why, in the Name of God, is none of these ever since produc'd? How came this Prince's Autographs to be thus neglected, when his Day is so strictly observ'd? This is a Piece of Respect that's usually paid to less considerable Persons; and I believe either of the Universities, would readily dily give Five Hundred Pounds to have such a Copy plac'd in their Library, tho' if they had the Manuscript, it would make nothing at all for their Purpose.

NOW let us consider the the Force of all those Testimonies join'd together, which is, that one saw the King write, he knew not what, but believ'd it might be this Book; another observ'd him writing his Resentments against the rude Behavior of the Soldiers, and so was ready to depose of his certain Knowledge, that Icon Basilike was his own; a third presumes the King might write it, because he read a great many Books; and they unanimously conclude, that he was the genuine Author, because the Book was written with his own Hand; all which Testimonies, considering the Premises, prove no more nor less than that the King could write and read, read, which was never deny'd by any that I know.

IT is further urg'd by the Ad-mirers of this famous Book, that Mr. Royston had it to print as from the King, in which all sides are agreed, and signifies nothing to the Merits of the Cause; for, be sure, the Bookseller was not made privy to the Secret. And as for the Anonymous Authors of two Books which are allegd'd by Mr. Wag-staf, we shall hear and examin them when they'll please to tell us their Names, tho' all they have to say is answer'd already. When Dr. Hol-lingworth tells us who are his sufficient Witnesses, we shall like-wise consider their Evidence; for such Affirmations must go for nothing in proving a Fact of this Nature, and may well serve for a Flourish, but not for an Ar-gument, no more than several more Assertions of his concerning this Matter, which were exploded by other Hands, and not defended by Mr. Wagstaf.
M.R. Le Pla Minister of Finchfield writes to Dr. Goodal, that one William Allen, who collected his Tythes for two Years, and was formerly a Servant to Dr. Gauden, affirm'd to him, 'That the Doctor told him he had borrow'd the Book, and was oblig'd to return it by such a time; that (besides what other time he might imploy in it) he sat up one whole Night to transcribe it; that he sat up in the Chamber with him, to wait upon him, to make his Fires, and snuff his Candles: and Mr. Le Pla thinks (for he's not positive) it was from Mr. Symmonds of Rayne that he said the Doctor had borrow'd the Book. Dr. Hollingworth has formerly affirm'd this Story of Symmonds's, who indeed assist'd afterwards in printing the Book at London; but was so far at this time from living at Rayne in the Neighborhood of Bocking where Dr. Gauden dwelt, that as Dr. Walker shews, Mr.
Mr. Symonds was long before sequestred for his Loyalty, fled to the King's Quarters, and one Mr. Atkins plac'd in his room by the Parliament. Nor is it credible that Dr. Gauden, whether he meant a Fraud or not, should give an Account of his Studies, much less discover the Secret of this Book for no Reason in the World, to never so trusty a Servant, especially to one that was to look after his Fire and snuff his Candles.

Now we come to the late King James's Letters Patents to Mr. Chiswel for Liberty to print his Father's Works; for they are urg'd as an Argument that he thought Icon Basilike genuin, tho' this Book be not specially mention'd in these Letters, which are general, and refer not to those of his Brother in 60. But here I must beg Leave to relate a Story that will give some Light to this Matter. In the Year 1677, the House of Commons having voted two L 3 Mont's Months Tax for the more decent Interment of Charles I. and to raise a Monument for him, Mr. Chiswel, being Mr. Royston's Son in law, thought of a Project that would answer the End of the Parliament, and not be unserviceable to his Father, with whom he was concern'd in Trade: and it was, that a Part of that Sum might be appropriated towards bearing the Charge of an Impression of the King's Works, wherof every Parish in England should be oblig'd to have a Copy, and to chain it in the Church; which, in his Opinion, would prove a more glorious and lasting Monument than any could be fram'd of Brass or Marble. This Thought was very well lik'd by several great Men of the Church and State, who shew'd themselves ready to promote it; and he did not, we may imagin, spare any Cost or Labor to have it succeed, tho' 'tis well known how little Charles the Second himself encourag'd it. But the Distrusts arising afterwards between the King and People, the Heats in Parliament, and particularly the Popish Plot, broke this, and all such Designs to Pieces: So that there was no farther Mention of any Monument for his Father. But when the Duke of York mounted the Throne, and had given Assurancıes of his Favor to the Church of England, Mr. Chiswel thought again of reviving his Project, and employ'd Sir Roger L'Estrange to procure him only King James's recommendatory Letter; for he did not expect any thing from Parliament as before, only suggested how agreeable this would seem to the King's Design (if it were real) of begetting a Confidence of himself in the Church. This Request the King refus'd, giving for his Reason, that Icon Basilike was not his Father's Book, and he could not therefore in Conscience recommend it as his.
Mr. Chiswel being inform'd of this Resolution by Sir Roger, answer'd, that he thought he could accommodate the Matter: For since the publishing of the rest would signify nothing without the Addition of Icon Basilike, he would remove it from the Front where it stood in the former Edition, and place it in the Rear after Finis, as Books of uncertain Authority use to be printed. To this the King consented, on condition some Expressions which he thought injurious to the Monarchy should be left out: with which Mr. Chiswel said he could by no means comply, as being a disingenuous Practice towards any Author, and a great Abuse on the Public; but propos'd, as another Expedient, that those Words should be put within Crotchets. And thus Icon Basilike stands now printed after the End of the second Part of the King's Works of the Edition of 86, by Mr. Chiswel.
Wel, who told me this Story himself, not to gratifie or injure any side, but as a Matter of Fact, wherein he was personally concern'd; and from whence he draws no manner of Inference. The Royal Brothers said the same to several others besides my Lord Anglesey, and particularly to some eminent Persons now living, who told me so much themselves, with a Liberty of mentioning their Names, which, after all that has bin offer'd, I see no Necessity of doing.

THAT nothing may be wanting I shall in the last place consider what is objected to the Prayer us'd by the King as his own in the time of his Captivity; but is, with very small Variation, the same that is said by Pamela to a Heathen Deity in Sir Philip Sydney's Arcadia. This Discovery, as we said before, was first made by Milton in his Iconoclastes. But Dr. Gill affirms, "That his Patient Henry Hill the Printer said it was put in by a
AMYNTOR.

Contrivance of MILTON, who catching his Friend Mr. Du GARD printing an Edition of Icon Basilike, got his Pardon by BRADshaw's Interest, on Condition he would insert PAMELA's Prayer to bring Discredit on the Book and the Author of it. I wonder at the Easiness of Dr. GILL and Dr. BERNARD to believe so gross a Fable, when it does not appear that Du GARD, who was Printer to the Parliament, ever printed this Book, and that the Prayer is in the second Edition publish'd by Mr. ROYSTON, whose Evidence is alleged to prove the Genuinness of the Book. And if the King's Friends thought it not his own, what made them print it in the first Impression of his Works, in Folio, by ROYSTON, in 62, when MILTON could not tamper with the Press? Or why did they let it pass in the last Impression in Folio by Mr. CHISWEL in the Year 86, when all the World knew that it was long long before expos'd in Iconoclastes? After this I need not go about to shew that Dr. Gill had no Reason for the great Opinion he entertain'd of Henry Hill, and how little he consulted his own Reputation by asserting that no Man was better vers'd in the secret History of those times; that he was intrusted with Intrigues by the great ones of that Government, who, as all the World knows, manag'd their Affairs after another rate. Nor will I insist upon his turning Papist in King James's time to become his Printer, as he was Oliver's before, or any other Circumstance to lessen his Credit, since it appears that what he averr'd is inconsistent with Matter of Fact, Mr. Royston, and not Du Gard, having publish'd the Celebrated Prayer which I add in this Place, laid Parallel with the Original.
The Prayer of King Charles, still'd A Prayer in Time of Captivity, Printed in pag. 94 of his Works, 1686; and also in Icon Basilike.

O Powerful and Eternal God, to whom nothing is so great that it may resist, or so small that it is contemn'd, look upon my Misery with thine Eye of Mercy, and let thine infinite Power vouchsafe to limit out some proportion of deliverance unto me, as to thee shall seem most convenient. Let not Injury, O Lord, triumph over me, and let my Fault by thy Hand be corrected; and make not my unjust Enemies the Ministers of thy Justice. But yet, my God, if in thy Wisdom this be the aptest Chastisement for my unexcusable Transgressions, if this
The PRAYER of PAMELA (to a Heathen Deity)
In Pembroke's Arcadia, pag. 248, 1674.

O All-seeing Light, and Eternal Life of all things, to whom nothing is either so great that it may resist, or so small that it is contemn'd, look upon my Misery with thine Ey of Mercy, and let thine infinite Power vouchsafe to limit out from Proportion of Deliverance unto me, as to thee shall seem most convenient. Let not Injury, O Lord, triumph over me, and let my Faults by thy Hand be corrected, and make not mine unjust Enemy the Minister of thy Justice. But yet, my God, if in thy Wisdom this be the aptest Chastisement for my unexcusable Folly, if this low Bon-this ungrateful Bondage be fittest for my over-high Desires, if the Pride of my (not-enough humble) Heart be thus to be broken, O Lord, I yield unto thy Will, and cheerfully embrace what Sorrow thou wilt have me suffer; only thus much let me crave of thee (let my Craving, O Lord be accepted of, since it even proceeds from thee) that by thy Goodness, which is thy self, thou wilt suffer some Beam of thy Majesty so to shine in my Mind, that I, who in my greatest Afflictions acknowledg it my noblest Title to be thy Creature, may still depend confidently on thee: Let Calamity be the Exercise, but not the Overthrow of my Virtue. O let not their prevailing Power be to my Destruction; and if it be thy Will that they more and more vex me with Punishment, yet, O Lord, never let their Wickedness have such a Hand, but that I may still carry a pure Mind and stedfast Resolution e-Bondage be fittest for my over-high Desires, if the Pride of my not-enough humble Heart be thus to be broken, O Lord, I yield unto thy Will, and joyfully embrace what Sorrow thou wilt have me suffer; only thus much let me crave of thee (let my Craving, O Lord, be accepted of thee, since even that proceeds from thee) let me crave even by the noblest Title which in my greatest Affliction I may give my self, that I am thy Creature, and by thy Goodness, which is thy self, that thou wilt suffer from Beams of thy Majesty to shine into my Mind, that it may still depend confidently on thee. Let Calamity be the Exercise, but not the overthrow of my Virtue; Let their Power prevail, but prevail not to Destruction; Let my Greatness be their Prey: Let my Pain be the Sweetness of their Revenge; let them (if so it seem good unto thee) vex me with more and more Punishment;
ver to serve thee without Fear or Presumption, yet with that hum-Confidence which may best please thee; so that at the last I may com to thy Eternal Kingdom, through the Merits of thy Son, our alone Savior, JESUS CHRIST. Amen.
ment: But, O Lord, let never their Wickedness have such a Hand, but that I may carry a pure Mind in a pure Body; and pausing a while; and O most gracious Lord, said she, whatever becomes of me, preserve the Virtuous Musidorus.
CONCLUSION.

I HOPE by this time I have satisfied Mr. Blackhall, since I have not only laid together the first Testimonies concerning this Matter, but also answer'd the Exceptions that were made to those Testimonies, and disproved the fresh Evidence which was produc'd on the behalf of Icon Basilike. But if he's offended at my Performance he may thank himself; seeing without his causeless Provocation I had never written a Word more on this Subject, as I shall not do hereafter, unless for as justifiable a Reason: For notwithstanding I may not answer every Scribler, yet I'll be misrepresented and abus'd by no body worth my notice.

indeed Mr. Blackhall is not the first who has occasion'd Controversies by a Thirtieth of January Sermon. Every body knows how much much the Observation of that Day was abus'd in the two last Reigns by servil Flatterers, who, not content to run shameful Parallels between the Sufferings of our Savior and the King (wherein the latter was often made to exceed) they taught the People the ridiculous Doctrin of Passive Obedience, as they allow'd the Prince an Unlimited and Despotic Power. This render'd those Persons justly odious to the Nation, and made sober Men frequently wish that such an Opportunity of doing Mischief might be taken away from those who fail'd not to improve it to the utmost. It was likewise observ'd how much these Sermons contributed to raise Animosities and Feuds in the Kingdom, and to continue the fatal Distinctions of Names and Parties, which every good Man should desire might be abolish'd, or bury'd in eternal Oblivion. Besides that for many weighty Reasons such Days ought not to be perpetuated, or otherwise in a little time ours will be as full as the Roman Calendar: wherefore I readily approve of the learned Bishop of Salisbury's Opinion, That our Deliverances should wear out the Memory of such tragical Accidents, which no body pretends to justify; and indeed I think it very reasonable (if our Legislators be of the same Opinion) that the Commemoration of his present Majesty's Landing to deliver us from Slavery on the Fifth of November, should hereafter take place of the Thirtieth of January. Other Holydays have bin recommended to a constant Observation, tho' they are since grown into disuse, or are legally abolish'd, which the best Friends of the Clergy desire may be the Fate of that Day out of their respect to the Church: For these Sermons do constantly put the People in mind mind of that Set of Men who preach’d ’em out of their Liberties in former times; and the honest Clergy themselves are still under an unhappy Necessity of saying many things, that (let ’em think what they will) are not extremely pleasing to the Body of the Nation. The Descendants of those concern’d in that Act, and many of ’em far from approving it, conceive themselves unkindly us’d in most of those Discourses; nor are the Posterity of the greatest Royalists in a better Condition, if that be a National Guilt that’s never to be expiated, tho’ neither they nor their Ancestors consented to it; to say nothing of the frequent Intermarriages and other Tyes between both the Parties.

I F the Extravagancies of those Sermons had terminated with the late Reign, few People, perhaps, would trouble themselves now about what’s past, unless constrain’d to it by som officious Chaplain: But they they cannot endure to hear the Members of the Parliament of 40 so infamously branded, considering how lately they were oblig’d themselves to assert their Laws and Liberties against the Martyrs Son, who violated and broke them at his Pleasure: And in this Sense many were of Opinion that King Charles’s Blood lay heavy on the Nation, which made them for the ease of the same to shake off the Burden of King James.

SOM, who otherwise Honor the Memory of King Charles the First, are angry to hear him, in Mr. Blackhall’s Language, call’d the best of Kings, and the best of Men; when they consider especially, that the Apostles were Men, and that several Persons among the Greek and Roman Heathens, did infinitely excel him in all Moral and Heroic Virtues. As for Princes, if good Manners could not make Mr. Blackhall except the present King, Ju-office at least might well oblige him to do it. King William has never dispensed with express Laws in favor of Popish Recusants. He never protected any of his Chaplains against the Parliament for preaching up Arbitrary Power. He never required Soldiers to be try'd by Martial Law in time of Peace; nor levy'd Loans or Ship money contrary to Law, much less imprison'd, fin'd or banish'd such as refus'd to pay those illegal Taxes. He does not countenance any Sibthorps, Manwarings, or Mountagues to teach his Subjects Non-Resistance, or to compliment himself with Arbitrary Power. He is so far from sending for Foren Troops to enslave the Nation, that he readily sent those away which he kept here by Law, as soon as he understood the Kingdom had no further need of their Service. He does not use to imprison Members of the House of Commons for using that that Freedom of Debate which is Essential to their Constitution. He never threaten'd to betake himself to other Councils than his Parliament (as Charles the First did) saying that Parliaments were in his Power, and that he might grow out of Love with them. Nor is it known that he went into the House of Commons to demand any of their Members; no more than he has seiz'd the Customs without any Act to empower him. He never promis'd (as King Charles did in a Letter to his Queen) that he would take away all the Penal Laws against Roman Catholicks as soon as he should be able, nor any thing else of this nature: For these are only a few Instances, not to blacken that Prince, but to shew how little some sort of People seem to value his present Majesty for generously restoring the Constitution, and for so willingly passing many many excellent Laws for enlarging or securing the Liberty of his Subjects; as well as for always paying such a Deference to Parliaments, which he not only assembles willingly, but likewise, according to ancient Custom, annually. In short, if King Charles the First was the best of Kings, the late King James is not half so bad as I think him: Nor is there any Doubt, if a second Restoration (which God and all Free-men forbid) should ever happen, but that the Abdication-Day would be appointed as a perpetual Fast. What Mr. Blackhall thinks of dispensing with the Laws and acting without, or contrary to them, we may guess, when he says, That King Charles's greatest Enemies could not charge him with any Vice or Immorality; as if only Whoring, Drinking, or Swearing were immoral Practices.
AMYNTOR. 167

SINCE this King (who truly was not the worst) must needs be counted the best of Men, I do not much wonder that Mr. Long of Exeter was for having some Portions of his pretended Book read in the Church for the further enlightning of our Understanding: Nor that Dr. Perinchief should tell us in his Life how some purchas’d Chips of the Block on which he was beheaded, and Parccels of the Sands discolor’d with his Blood, as also some of his Hair, Hoping, continues he, they would be a means of Cure for that Disease, which our English Kings, through the Indulgence of kind Heaven, by their Touch did usually heal: And it was reported that these Reliques, experienc’d, fail’d not of the Effect. Now who can laugh at the Popish Legends, and be serious when he reads this Passage? Whereas, if there was ever any Power in England of curing the King’s Evil, it was plainly lodg’d in the People.
BEFORE I conclude, I must remark, that tho his pretended Friends were so ready to father such Books on Charles the First wherein he had no Hand, yet they industriously left out of his Works a Letter to Pope Gregory XV, whereof I can prove him as evidently to be the Author as Cicero or Virgil may be entitul'd to the Philippicks and the Æneids. There is an interpolated Copy of it in the first Volum of Rushworth’s Collections: It is rightly inserted in the Quarto Edition of a Book call’d Cabala, or Mysteries of State: It is also in the Italian Mercury of Vittorio Siri: in Du Chesne’s French History of England, Scotland and Ireland: and in several Spanish and Italian Authors. Pope Urban VIII mentions it in the Letter which he likewise sent this Prince, with another to his Father King James; both which may be read in Rushworth’s Collections. Now
Now was not the omitting of this Letter a notorious Fraud, since that it alone, with those Letters which the Parliament publish'd to disgrace him, and a few Pieces besides, make up all his genuine Writings; For as to those Messages, Propositions, Declarations, Treaties, and other public Papers, which fill that bulky Folio they call his Works, whoever takes them to be his, is likewise capable of believing he was the true Author of Icon Basilike.

THIS is all I had to write concerning this famous Book, not to reflect on the Memory of Charles the First, but in my own Vindication; being a Liberty not deny'd me by Equity or Law, and which, if I neglected to improve, I should be more unjust to my self than my Adversaries, whose Malice I shall readily forget, and heartily pray God to forgive.

FINIS.